Lewis and Susan Tortariello display a tie clip they were given when they visited Washington D.C. and attempted to lend President Nixon their life savings of $10,000, interest free, and 22,000 pennies to help with his defense against possible impeachment. # 2 cancer-linked pesticides banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has banned manufacture of two pesticides suspected of causing cancer. The agency also warns of possible health hazards if Congress fails to pass additional legislation to control harmful chemicals.

The agency on Friday placed the ban on the pesticides aldrin and dieldrin as "an unacceptably high cancer risk."

EPA administrator Russell E. Train cited findings of dieldrin, which is chemically related to aldrin, in a wide range of foods and noted that dieldrin caused tumors in mice.

Meanwhile, other EPA officials said the agency is seriously concerned about the lack of authority for EPA to test chemicals in public commerce for their possible ability to induce cancer or other serious health effects.

Deputy Administrator John R. Quarles Jr. urged a congressional conference committee to work out a final version of legislation authorizing EPA to test toxic chemicals and, where necessary, ban their sale.

Without such testing, serious health effects may not be detected until they show up among the public, EPA officials said.

Such bills have passed both the House and Senate but have been in a conference committee for nine months.

Quarles said unless the legislation is resolved in conference and passed by Congress in the next two months, it probably will lose all chance of action by Congress, increasingly preoccupied with the impeachment proceedings against President Nixon.

He said the delay would mean the legislation would have to start all over again in the next Congress, delaying passage at least a year if not indefinitely.

The director of EPA's toxic substances office, Glenn Schweitzer, said public health officials have identified some 1,300 chemicals which cause tumors "under certain conditions." But he said there was little or no evidence to determine whether they pose a threat to human health.

The ban on the two pesticides will take effect on Wednesday unless appealed by Shell Chemical Co., the only U.S. manufacturer of aldrin and dieldrin. An appeal could delay effectiveness of the ban another 15 days.

"We will fight this attempt to suspend our insecticide," Shell spokesman Norman Alstedter said. "There is no evidence whatsoever to associate this chemical with cancer in man."

"The action EPA proposes will have a sudden and severe effect on the price the American consumer will pay for milk, meat and eggs. We cannot square it with current economic policy in support of increased food production and the fight against inflation," Alstedter said.

"U.S. agriculture will now be in short supply of pesticides it vitally needs for top production of corn, the nation's single most important crop in 1975," the Shell spokesman said.

EPA has been considering for three years whether to cancel the federal registration of dieldrin and aldrin and thus ban their sale.

EPA advised Shell last April 5 that it was considering a suspension order and asked the manufacturer to commit itself voluntarily "not to build up an inventory for 1975 use" until the case was decided.

Shell refused to stop production voluntarily. Train's order would suspend further manufacture of aldrin and dieldrin at least until the cancellation proceedings are completed and a final decision is reached.

Over-all tax reform measure advances

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax-reform package designed to sprinkle benefits among taxpayers and to assure at least minimal tax payments from the wealthy has passed a key House panel.

And before giving tentative approval to the wide-ranging tax reform measure Friday, the House Ways and Means Committee combined the bill with the so-called energy tax reform bill after a warning that a Congress preoccupied with impeachment would more readily pass one tax bill than deal with two separate measures.

The biggest proposed benefit to the average taxpayer is the provision to boost the maximum standard deduction to $2,500 from $2,000, and to hike the minimum standard deduction to $1,400 from $1,300 on single returns and to $1,500 on joint returns.

The new minimum tax rate proposed by the committee would impose a 14 per cent levy on the first $50,000, 17 per cent between $50,000 and $100,000, and 20 per cent thereafter. The experts estimate this would affect some 187,000 tax returns.

To sweeten the burden for upper-income citizens, the panel proposed a slight decrease in the maximum capital gains tax rate, dropping it to 35 per cent from the present ceiling of 36.5 per cent.

The combination of hikes and cuts in tax levies was expected to produce a net revenue gain of $500 million annually, based on changes that would increase some taxes by $7 billion and decrease other taxes by $6.5 billion.

One of the major ingredients in the tax-bike side was the last-minute amendment that accelerates the previously-approved plan to phase out the controversial petroleum depletion allowance. The depletion tax break presently saves oilmen between $2 billion and $3 billion a year in federal taxes.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., committee chairman, successfully urged upon his colleagues the wisdom of starting the three-year phase-out this year, as opposed to the original starting date of Jan. 1, 1975. The first step in the gradual elimination of the 22 per cent depletion allowance would drop it to 15 per cent, retroactive to last Jan. 1.

The timing of this year's legislative calendar is heavily influenced by the pending impeachment question, Mills indicated. Thus, he argued, the Senate is faced with the prospect of President Nixon's trial and that body would only have time to consider one major tax bill this year.

At his urging, the committee wrapped both bills into a single package, which is expected to reach the House for action after the presidential impeachment proceedings there.

White House sees Nixon as underdog

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shunning a move to censure rather than impeach President Nixon, White House aides are portraying the proceeding in the House of Representatives as a political struggle, with President Nixon in the role of the underdog.

Republicans on Friday introduced in the House a resolution offering an alternative to a full-fledged impeachment proceeding. It would censure Nixon for "maladministration and moral insensitivity" but not call for his removal from office.

White House spokesmen had no formal comment on the resolution introduced by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., and signed by House GOP leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona.

While urging that the House be given such an alternative, Rhodes himself took no stand for or against censure. He scheduled a news conference for Monday to announce his position on impeachment.

But presidential aides disclaimed any part in the move to censure rather than impeach, with several saying they were surprised by the introduction of the resolution.

White House spokesman Gerald L. Warren, talking with newsmen before presentation of the resolution, for the first time described impeachment as "a political struggle."

"We recognize the situation as it exists in the House ... we face an up-hill struggle," Warren said. He later added that while he was not conceding the House would impeach Nixon, "if you had to make odds ... you would have to place the President in the role of the underdog."

Warren's reference to the proceeding as political marked an apparent shift in White House strategy. Previously, he and other spokesmen have stressed the legal aspects of the proceeding and contended that the evidence would vindicate Nixon.

Warren said again that White House strategy is not based on head counts in the House and insisted that Nixon has no intention of resigning.

The spokesman described Nixon as "in very good spirits" and said he is spending much of his time reviewing tapes and other materials being turned over to U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica as ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court last week.

In Sirica's courtroom on Friday, White House lawyers were ordered to turn over Nixon's notes about subpoenaed Watergate conversations by Wednesday.

Sirica set the deadline after pressing the White House to speed the delivery of tapes and materials of 64 conversations and related documents subpoenaed for the Watergate coverup trial.

Meanwhile, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said he will ask the Senate to subpoena the tapes and materials of the 64 conversations if the Senate conducts a presidential impeachment trial.

House Speaker Carl Albert indicated opposition to censure, saying "I'm certainly not recommending it. I would not vote to censure the President. I would either vote for or against the (impeachment) resolution."

But Democratic Whip John J. McFall of California said "it's a possible way out" and contended House members should have that alternative.

"The whole thing is very sad anyway," McFall said. "And if a man wants the alternative of voting to censure, I think he should have it."

In other action, Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., notified the House that 204 headsets would be ready in four rooms on Monday for members wanting to listen to tape recordings of President Nixon's talks with top aides.

Rodino said 12 of the committee's 19 tapes deal with Watergate and seven with dairy, ITT and domestic surveillance allegations. He recommended that members listen to them in conjunction with volumes of evidence that have been sent to all 435 House members.

Brewster to get new trial in bribery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the judge's instructions to the jury were inadequate, the U.S. Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for former Maryland Sen. Daniel B. Brewster on charges he accepted an illegal gratuity.

In its ruling Friday, the court said Chief U.S. District Judge George L. Hart Jr., "in spite of a conscientious and valiant effort," failed to make an adequate distinction between bribery and the lesser charge of accepting an illegal gratuity.

Brewster, a Democrat from suburban Baltimore, was convicted on Nov. 17, 1972 of a charge he accepted $14,500 from a lobbyist for a mail-order firm in exchange for his vote on postal rate legislation.

Hart sentenced Brewster, now 50, to two to six years imprisonment and a $30,000 fine. Brewster has been free pending appeal. He lost a re-election bid in November 1968 to Republican Charles McC. Mathias.

Hart's instructions may have tempted the jury to take the middle ground between convicting Brewster of bribery or "cheerfully acknowledging a campaign contribution," the court said.

"A defendant is entitled to more than a possible jury-room compromise. He is entitled to have his guilt or innocence voted up or down on the clearest possible lines of distinction," its 41-page opinion said.

Cyrus T. Anderson, former lobbyist for Spiegel Inc. of Chicago, was found guilty of bribery by the same jury that convicted Brewster. His appeal is still pending.

Humphrey aide, co-op tied      Agency for monitoring wages, prices proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack L. Chestnut, former campaign manager for Hubert H. Humphrey, has been named in a sworn statement as the man who set up an illegal $12,000 corporate payment for Humphrey's 1970 Senate campaign.

Barry Nova, an advertising executive who worked on the campaign, said in a sworn, notarized statement that Chestnut asked him to submit $12,000 worth of Humphrey advertising bills to the nation's largest dairy co-operative. The co-op, Associated Milk Producers Inc., has admitted paying the bills illegally from corporate funds.

Nova's statement is in the open files of the Senate Watergate Committee, along with a copy of a letter in which Chestnut requested the co-op's lobbyist, Bob A. Lilly, to pay the bills.

Also included are two cancelled corporate checks for $6,000 each and a statement that Lilly sent the checks to Chestnut for forwarding to the advertising firm.

Chestnut has invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to testify to the Senate committee about corporate payments to the Humphrey campaigns in 1970 and 1972. Humphrey has denied knowledge of the corporate money.

Nova worked as a political advertising specialist for the now-bankrupt firm of Lennen & Newell, headquartered in New York.

He said in his statement that he advised the Humphrey campaign on preparation of advertising materials.

"Early in the campaign I received a telephone call from the Humphrey campaign manager, Jack Chestnut, who requested that Lennen & Newell submit its next regular monthly invoice to an organization he identified as the 'American Milk Producers,' rather than directly to the campaign headquarters."

Nova, of Greenwich, Conn., seems to have gotten the name of the co-op slightly mixed up. In any case, the bills were made out correctly to "Associated Milk Producers, Inc. c/o Bob A. Lilly." Copies of them also are in the files. Each bore the words, "Consulting fee for Minnesota."

The last of the bills was dated May 8. On May 12, Chestnut wrote Lilly "Dear Bob, enclosed is the correct billing for Lennen & Newell. Please return the check to us and we will forward it to Lennen & Newell. Very truly yours, Jack L. Chestnut."

Lilly's lawyer, Anthony Nicholas of San Antonio, sent a statement quoting Lilly as saying that "in truth and in fact, the money was to go to Jack Chestnut for the Hubert H. Humphrey campaign at the time."

Nicholas said his client acted on authority of the co-op's general manager, Harold S. Nelson, who pleaded guilty this week to conspiring to pay corporate money to Humphrey and others.

Nova, in his statement, said he had assumed the bills would be paid from a political trust, not from a corporation. When Chestnut called him, he said, "We believe the proposed payment to be entirely legal and proper."

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Gen. Bruce Palmer, commander of the U.S. Army Readiness Command, is retiring at age 61, one year beyond the Army's mandatory retirement age.

Palmer, a veteran of World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War, said Friday he'll retire Aug. 31 after 42 years of military service.

Former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird made an exemption for him in 1973 so he could be assigned to the readiness command, headquartered at MacDill Air Force Base.

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conceding there is no immediate hope of lowering the cost of living, the Nixon administration is asking Congress to create an agency to monitor wage and price increases.

The "Cost of Living Task Force" would have none of the wage-price control authority held by the Cost of Living Council, which went out of existence on June 30.

Instead, the new agency would pull together data needed to dissuade business and labor when their demands for higher wages and prices threaten the fight against inflation and shortages.

The call for the new agency, issued Friday by the White House, was among the first specific inflation-fighting steps taken by the administration since authority to control wages and prices expired April 30.

Even as the White House was urging formation of the new task force, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon was telling the congressional Joint Economic Committee that President Nixon's policy of budgetary restraint will take time to show results.

"The best we can hope for right now is just to maintain the present price structure and avoid further increases," Simon said.

Initial congressional reaction to the monitoring-agency proposal was favorable, even though Congress earlier this year rejected such an idea when, with the backing of business and labor, it allowed wage-price controls to expire.

However, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who on Wednesday outlined Democratic economic proposals to a nationwide television audience, said he doubts a monitoring agency that works out of the White House "can inspire the support and confidence necessary to successfully discourage inflationary wage and price hikes."

Bentsen said he will offer legislation giving Congress a voice on the agency.

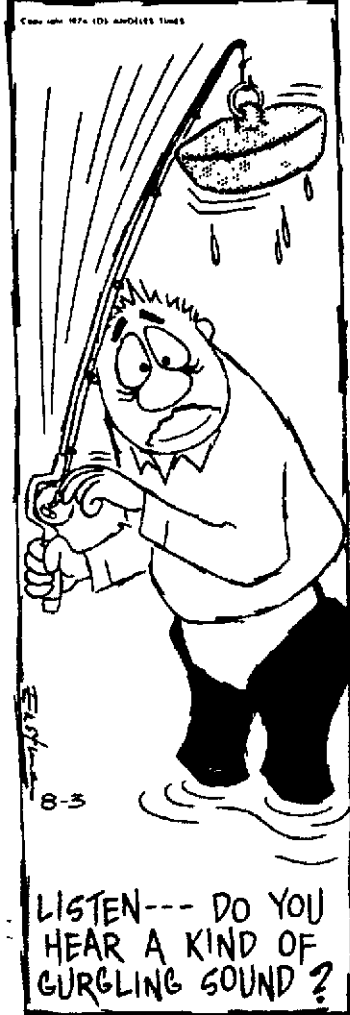

Until Friday, the administration had been urging budget restraint as its only weapon against inflation.

Nixon has promised to cut his proposed budget for this fiscal year by $5 billion, down to $300 billion, but Simon said no decision has been made on what programs will be slashed.

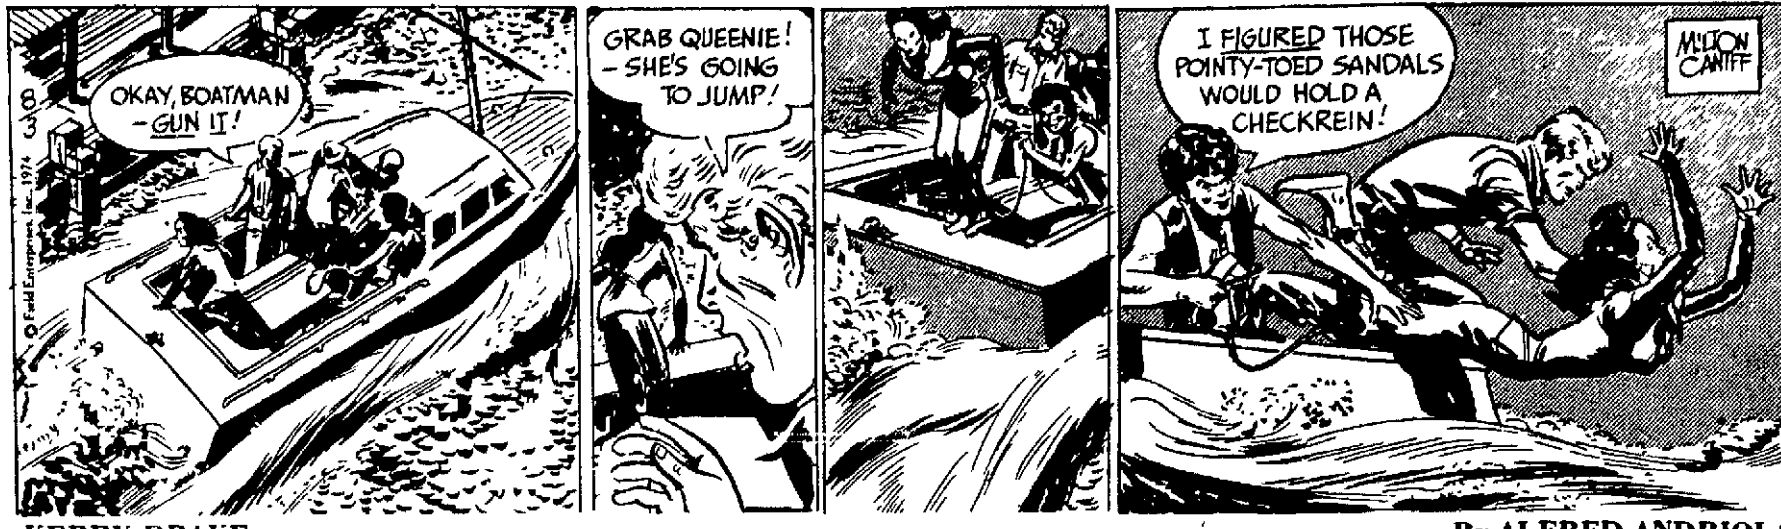

The Senate took a first step in this direction Friday by voting to cut a $3.27-billion transportation appropriation bill by 3.5 per cent.

Furry animal pictures use fabric for bodies

Animal pictures that include furry bodies are fun to make, especially if you have a dog or cat to be represented by the picture.

The body of the animal will be a piece of cloth that has a fur like surface. This may be a piece of velvet or any other type of pile-weave cloth, even including a piece of carpeting of the proper color.

First outline the whole picture on heavy drawing paper or cardboard, of the dimensions shown in Figure 1.

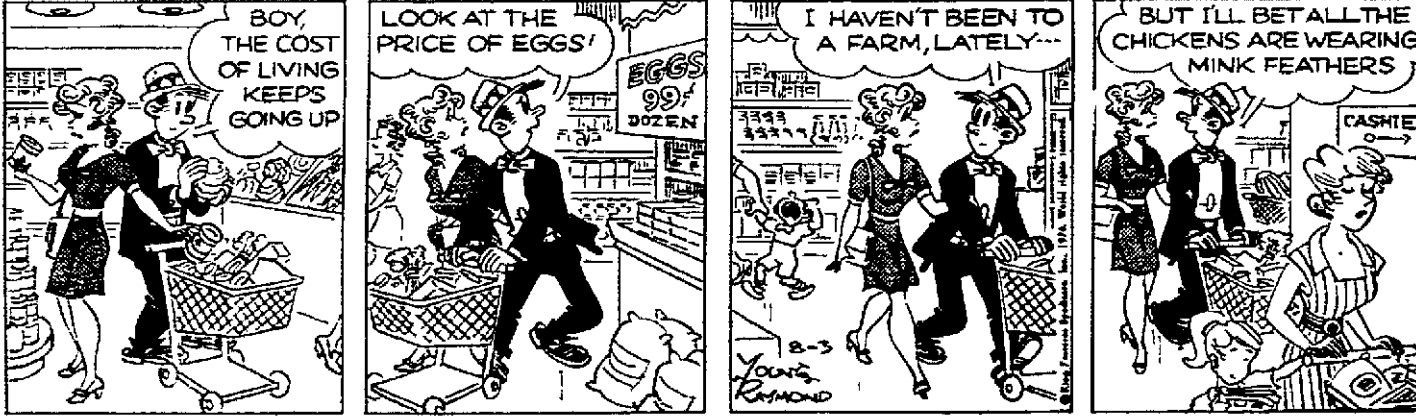

If it is a picture of a cat, show the animal sitting up. If

Good news for area authors

Jingo's just heard some good news about two theater people in the Fox Cities. Both are members of Attic Theatre and both are Lawrence graduates.

Anne Glasner, Appleton, and Jim Fradrich, Menasha, have just been notified that their musical play for children, "The Musicians of Bremen," has won the Wilmette (Ill.) Children's Theatre award for 1974. The script is Anne's and the musical score is Jim's. The contest award brings a cash prize of $200 to the co-authors.

The musical drama is not unknown to youngsters in this area, of course, since it was written and composed back in 1972 for the Lawrence Holiday for Children performances. Then, it was presented by Children's Theater, of which Anne is current president, in the spring of 1974. It toured New London and Clintonville under Children's Theater banner after the productions in Appleton.

Jingo finds this news exciting because the two people involved are seriously interested in theater. Jim, the composer-arranger, is interested in musical theater in all forms. He has worked with Attic Theatre and for Riverside Players. For the latter, he was in the Riverside Orchestra for several seasons and helped get the Friends of Riverside started as this group's first pianist.

Jim is a June graduate of Lawrence Conservatory of Music and has had many musical honors to his credit. He has won several auditions, appearing as guest artist with the University of Wisconsin-Platteville Symphony, the Milwaukee Catholic Symphony and was one of the eight soloists for the Lawrence 1973 commencement. He was the first winner of the Fox Valley Symphony Youth competition and appeared with the group in concert. The pianist-arranger has worked for the Miss Appleton pageant as accompanist. His work at Lawrence Conservatory was taken under Robert Below and during these years he was chosen one of the eight state winners in the Wisconsin Music Association competition. Anne is known for her work with children as well as being an Attic Theatre actress of note. Her present production with the Appleton Recreation Association is "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" with 35 youngsters in the cast she's directing. Duane Bosin, speech teacher at Appleton West, is technical director. Anne teaches drama part-time at Conant Junior High School in Neenah.

Her latest acting stint with Attic was in the role of crochety, Irish Deirdre O'Malley in the recent Noel Coward drama "Waiting in the Wings." Anne is remembered by Attic fans for her vivacious role as "Mame" in the musical of the same name and several years ago as the mother in "The Bad Seed" and as the witch Jennett in "The Lady's Not for Burning."

She's tried her hand at writing before, often "adapting" material for youthful actors. This one with Jim doing the music is the most ambitious. When she heard about the contest, she bundled up script and score and mailed them off to Wilmette, Ill. last May. The result is that their musical is a winner — good news in anybody's theater book.

Ann Landers

Big danger is relatives

Dear Ann Landers: May I add my nickel's worth and straighten out some misconceptions regarding "mercy killing" or euthanasia?

Since Americans are guaranteed by the Constitution the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, should it not also include the right to die if it means a release from suffering?

Many people who insist they are against euthanasia are not aware that there are two kinds: (1) Active, which means "putting someone to sleep" by administering drugs, and (2) passive, the withdrawal of all medical or mechanical support, without which the patient would die.

Euthanasia need not be administered. If it were legalized, it would be on an individual basis, left up to the patient and the immediate family. There would be a signed legal document and the consent of at least two physicians would be required.

For those who are concerned with the religious aspects, this is what Pope Pius XII said: "The removal of pain and consciousness by means of drugs, when medical authorities suggest it, is permitted by religion and morality to both doctors and patient, even if the use of drugs will shorten life."

I hope I have shed some light on this controversial subject and that people will stop using the words "murder" and "sin" when speaking of euthanasia.—H.B., Orlando, Florida

Dear H.B.: Thank you for your letter. I am opposed to active euthanasia, but consider your definition of the passive type a humane approach to end the suffering of terminally ill patients for whom there is no hope.

The only danger, as I see it, is that convincing relatives might conceivably make a deal with a couple of unscrupulous doctors in order to come into an inheritance or relieve themselves of an unwanted burden before the patient reaches the critical or irreversible stage.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently our "good friend" and family lawyer settled my mother's estate (proper will, savings account, checking account, and a small safety deposit box). The grand total was $4,000. The lawyer charged us $2,000 for his services.

I never had dollar signs in my eyes for my mother's money. She was a woman of modest means and she lived frugally. (Incidentally, the estate must be divided among three of us.) I'd like to know if there is any way a person can arrange his estate so a lawyer won't get one cent?—Burned By Reality

Dear B.: First things first. When a client believes he has been overcharged by a lawyer, he can take his grievance to the local bar association.

Next: As for avoiding the problem in the future, see an estate planner (almost every bank has one) and discuss methods that best suit your situation. Lawyers, of course, serve a valuable function, but there is nothing wrong with asking in advance about the fee—even if the guy is "a friend." (Copyright 1974)

Neighborhood carnival planned for Tuesday

A neighborhood carnival against dystrophy has been scheduled for 1 to 8 p.m. Tuesday at 707 E. Roeland Ave.

Brian Buxton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Buxton, will serve as ringmaster, assisted by Tom and Tim Schwister, Michael Gauss, Laurie and Terrie Buxton, Carrie Hannemann, Judd Brickler, Rick Zogman and Scott Fey.

The carnival will feature pop toss, ring toss, bowling on the green, darts, wheelbarrow penny pitch and other games. Fortune-telling and wagon rides will also be available, as will refreshments. A silent auction will highlight the afternoon.

All proceeds will go to aid the fight against dystrophy. Rain date for the carnival is Aug. 8.

Kaukauna bridge meeting slated

KAUKAUNA - Many Outagamie County officials are expected to attend the 6:30 p.m. meeting Monday of the board of public works for a discussion on the Wisconsin Avenue bridge. Kaukauna supervisors, the county executive, board chairman and chairman of the highway commission are expected to attend.

City Clerk Mrs. Joan Cleveland was requested by the board to send invitations to these officials for a discussion on replacement of the lift span portion of the Wisconsin Avenue bridge. The city contemplates seeking county assistance in financing the bridge project.

Representatives of Owen Ayres and Associates, Eau Claire, bridge designers, and Howard, Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff, Kansas City, Mo., consultants, also are expected to attend the session.

Representatives of the latter firm will explain the advantages and disadvantages of a vertical lift bridge compared to a bascule-type bridge, give cost estimates and a tentative timetable for completion.

Courts

A pretrial conference was set Tuesday for Aug. 26 for Ricky Klapper, 18, 609 W. Bell St., Appleton, charged with causing damage to property in the Appleton police station.

Klapper allegedly bent a segment of a window in an interrogation room of the building in an attempt to escape July 31. Bail was set at $100 signature bond.

He appeared before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

An Appleton boy who forged $510 in bank checks he stole from his mother was sent to Lincoln State School Thursday.

The youth, 15, admitted he used about $200 from the bogus check proceeds to buy marijuana. He cashed the checks at Appleton area businesses in June.

He pleaded guilty to 14 counts of forgery in Outagamie County Juvenile Court. He was placed on supervision June 14 after being found guilty of eight counts of forgery. He had forged $300 in checks he stole from his mother at that time.

Judge R. Thomas Cane found the boy delinquent before committing him to Lincoln. He ordered the parents to pay $10 a week toward his support at Lincoln and he ordered the boy to repay his parents, who made restitution for the bad checks.

A 60-day examination at Central State Hospital was ordered Thursday.

for Dennis Bouche, 58, Wausau, who changed his plea to no contest and was found guilty of indecent behavior with a 3-year-old boy June 11.

Bouche had pleaded innocent in Outagamie County Court last month, but he changed his plea in Circuit Court Thursday.

Acting Circuit Court Judge R. Thomas Cane did not set a date for sentencing. The charge was brought following investigation by Appleton detectives.

A pretrial conference was set for Aug. 30 for Marvin T. Baeten, 18, 4704 Ballard Road, Appleton, who is charged with disorderly conduct and possession of marijuana. He pleaded not guilty Wednesday before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Baeten was arrested at 2 a.m. Wednesday in the 100 block of N. State Street in Appleton after police say he broke a beer glass on the concrete after they told him to return it to a bar.

Larry Stephan Dobbs, 24, 422½ W. College Ave., Appleton, was found indigent Wednesday and appointed an attorney in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Dobbs is charged with disorderly conduct. Bail was set at $100 signature bond and the case was continued to Aug. 2.

Dobbs was arrested early Wednesday morning after he reportedly knocked on the door of a W. College Ave. apartment and wanted to fight with a resident, according to the complaint.

The case against Joseph R. Ratzman, 20, 214 Mill St., Little Chute, was dismissed Wednesday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Ratzman was charged with racing. He was arrested at 9:30 p.m. Monday on W. Kimberly Avenue.

A move to dismiss the case of Gregory Bestor, 17, 809 Hancock St., Appleton, was refused Tuesday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 by Judge Nick F. Schaefer. Bestor is charged with shooting into the house of former Outagamie County narcotics agent Thomas Droostan June 10. His case was waived out of juvenile court July 12.

A preliminary examination is scheduled for Aug. 14. Bail was set at $1,000 signature bond with the condition that Bestor reside with his mother.

Henry G. Kuhn, 49, 815 N. Madison St., Little Chute, pleaded not guilty Tuesday to a charge of solicitation of funds by an unregistered charity and to misrepresentation. Outagamie County Court Branch 2 Judge Nick F. Schaefer set bail at $200 signature bond and a pretrial conference for Sept. 17.

Kuhn is charged with using the names of the Fox River Area Girl Scout Council and the Bay Lakes Council No. 635, Boy Scouts of America, in attempting to solicit funds through a fraudulent organization called Recycling for Goodwill. He is charged with operating the organization from May 25 to June 25.

The case of Norman Cowling, 23, 1124 S. Jackson St., Appleton, was continued to today by Judge Nick F. Schaefer Wednesday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2. Cowling is charged with obstructing officers.

He was arrested early Wednesday morning after allegedly pulling on an officer who was trying to break up a fight near the intersection of W. College Avenue and State Street. Reports indicate it took five officers to control Cowling.

Raymond Pardun, 22, Milwaukee, was sentenced to 10 days in jail and fined $150 or 37 days in jail Wednesday after pleading guilty to driving after revocation of driver's license. In addition, Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 fined Pardun $40 or 10 days in jail for speeding.

Pardun was arrested at 3:45 p.m. July 27 on W. Main Street in Hortonville.

Mark L. Lemke, 22, route 1, Fremont, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana, in Outagamie County Court Branch 2 Tuesday. Judge Nick F. Schaefer continued the case to Monday.

Lemke was arrested at 2:20 p.m. May 20 at a supermarket on N. Meade Street in Appleton.

Judge Nick F. Schaefer set a pretrial conference for Oct. 1 for Kenneth L. Steffens, 32, 1618 N. Hall St., Appleton, who pleaded not guilty to a battery charge Tuesday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Steffens is charged with striking Kay E. Zeinert at a Wisconsin Avenue bar at 2 a.m. July 4. Zeinert suffered a cut eye that required five stitches and a bruised elbow, according to reports.

Rick Tetzlaff, 1403 W. Fourth St., Kimberly, Tuesday pleaded not guilty to a battery charge before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2. A trial date was set for Oct. 17.

Tetzlaff is charged with striking and kicking George Marquardt near the intersection of Washington and Locust streets in Appleton at 2 a.m. June 30. Marquardt reportedly was knocked unconscious and received a cut on the head.

A trial was set for Oct. 24 for Bernard P. Przybiski, 426 W. Seventh St., Kaukauna, charged with causing damage to five windows belonging to the City of Kaukauna. Przybiski appeared before Judge Nick F. Schaefer Tuesday in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

He is charged with damaging windows in a city building next to the Kaukauna swimming pool May 2. Estimated damage was $78.89. Bail was set at $100 signature bond.

Weather forecast

Showers are forecast today for west Texas and New Mexico and most of Florida. Rain is expected from the upper Great Lakes to the Northeast and along the Appalachians. Warm, humid weather is forecast for the East and cooler weather for most of the Plains.

Rain likely over weekend

Weekend rain is providing a pleasant forecast for Wisconsin farmers, but recreation-minded residents may not be too happy about the prediction.

Weather officials said showers and thunderstorms were likely in the northeast today, with a chance of rainfall in the south and west as well.

U.S. Weather Bureau officials in Green Bay, said skies will be cloudy and cool, with occasional showers tonight and Sunday morning. They predicted a decrease in cloudiness late Sunday.

The low tonight will be in the mid-50's and the high Sunday near 70 degrees. Winds will be from the north-northwest at 6-12 miles per hour.

The outlook for Monday is for warmer temperatures possibly in the low 80's.

The Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. records show that in a 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today Appleton had a high of 76 and a low of 63. Barometric pressure was 29.78 and steady, winds from the southeast at 3 miles per hour, and the dew point was 63. Relative humidity was 97 per cent. There was a trace of precipitation.

Sunset today at 8:17 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 5:43 a.m. Moonrise today at 8:13 p.m. Last Quarter on Aug. 10.

Milwaukee area woman strangled

RACINE (AP) — An unemployed switchboard operator whose body was found in the Root River south of Milwaukee was strangled, a preliminary autopsy report said Friday.

Authorities declined comment on what were called similarities with the deaths since September of five other women on Milwaukee's south side.

Susan P. Wicinski, 21, found Thursday in the river, was last seen early Wednesday by a friend in an alley near her South Milwaukee home.

Authorities said the victim's body showed signs of puncture wounds and bruises.

Miss Wicinski's mother said the young woman had worked for a telephone company until May, and had been looking for work.

A man has been arrested in the slaying of one of two women found dead in a Milwaukee motel.

Courts

Jane Bazile, 17, 524 E. Frances St., Appleton, was waived from Juvenile Court to Outagamie County Court Branch 2 on charges of shoplifting six records from the S. S. Kresge Co. June 28 and possession of marijuana on the same date.

She appeared Tuesday before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer, who continued proceedings to Aug. 2.

Three Little Chute and Kaukauna youths, ages 15 and 17, were placed on six months of supervision each in Outagamie County Juvenile Court Monday after they admitted stealing three cases of beer June 8 from a garage at the George Hietpas home, 401 E. Lincoln St., Little Chute. Judge R. Thomas Cane also ordered the boys to make restitution and to give 15 hours of work to their communities.

A 17-year-old Appleton boy will be on supervision until he turns 18 as a result of his conviction on six counts of theft, five of them involving cars, and one charge of marijuana possession.

Juvenile Court Judge R. Thomas Cane withheld a delinquency finding and ordered restitution totaling $223 for damage done to two of the cars the boy stole.

Police said the boy took a 1962 car owned by John Weiss, 1616 N. Douglas St., Appleton, on May 17, 21 and 22, while the car was parked near Appleton High School-West. He also admitted taking a 1973 car from Russ Darrow Chrysler-Plymouth on May 28 and a 1962 car owned by Wilbur A. Kuborn, 537 N. Garfield Place, Appleton, from a super market parking lot on June 4.

The youth also admitted stealing truck keys from Clement Geenen, 625 N. Story St., Appleton, on June 5 and pleaded guilty to a charge of having marijuana at Appleton High School-West on May 9. School officials found marijuana in his jacket pocket.

Three Appleton boys involved in the thefts of three bicycles in April and May have been placed on one year's supervision to the Outagamie County Department of Social Services.

The boys, ages 14 and 15, admitted stealing a 10-speed bicycle from Steve Huplauf, 909 Theodore St., and another 10-speed bike from John Quella, 1130 S. Telulah Ave.

They admitted receiving and concealing a stolen bicycle owned by Todd Grunert, 906 S. Christine St. The youths also were ordered to pay for damage done to the bikes.

Speed limit enforcement stepped up

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The motorist's foot is growing heavier on the accelerator pedal, and the State Highway Patrol says its ticket-writing pencil is growing proportionately busier.

The national speed limit of 55 miles an hour, enacted in an effort to conserve gasoline, is being ignored more frequently and speeding arrests are increasing, the patrol reported Friday.

A spokesman said many citizens have been contacting the patrol, demanding enforcement of the speed limit because of its apparent safety factor.

Wisconsin's 1974 traffic fatality pace is about 25 per cent less than it was at this time last year. The National Safety Council says the reduced speed ceiling is responsible for the nation's having the lowest auto death rate in a half century.

A state patrol spokesman said arrest figures not only reflect the patrol's response to citizen demand for enforcement, but also indicate more persons are returning to the pavement after recovering from last winter's gasoline shortages.

The patrol issued 7,136 speeding citations in July compared with 2,954 in July, 1973, he said, and arrests in June were more than double the figure for January.

"The public gets the kind of enforcement it asks for," he said. "We are willing to work in those areas where the public outcry indicates there is a problem."

When the limit was dropped to 55 m.p.h., the legislature made it uniform for cars, trucks and other vehicles. The uniform aspect was applauded by safety experts who said contrasting speed levels create traffic hazards.

Shotgun blast wounds youth

BLACK CREEK — Gene Behnke, 16, of route 2, was accidentally shot in his right leg with a 12 gauge shotgun by his brother, Allen, 17, at about 2:45 p.m. Friday when the latter was about to put on the safety latch on the firearm and it went off.

Gene was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Appleton. His condition is described by a hospital spokesman as "serious."

The boys' father, Arthur E. Behnke, was at home at the time of the incident. No charges will be filed.

Claim Lucey used pressure for campaign gifts

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Former Lt. Gov. Jack Olson said Friday that pressure was put on contractors and chiropractors to contribute to a campaign fund for Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Olson, campaign manager for GOP gubernatorial candidate William Dyke, said at a news conference that the state was looking into the matter but that he was "not in a position to go any further" in his statement.

Atty. Gen. Robert Warren would neither confirm nor deny that an investigation was under way.

Several of the governor's top aides reacted angrily to the Olson statement.

"There has never been an instance of a contract signed or not signed on the basis of giving or not giving," said Robert Dunn, Lucey's executive secretary. "That's not the way this governor functions."

James Wood, a member of Lucey's campaign staff, said Olson's allegation suggested the Dyke campaign was having fund-raising problems and that this was merely "an attempt to get free publicity."

Obituaries

Clifford J. (Shorty) Dunsirn

EAA pilot crashes with dream

BY MARK HANSMANN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — A "very fascinating man" who envisioned airway-highway connections throughout the world crashed Friday with his dream.

Dewey Bryan, 53, of Highland, Mich., was killed instantly when his "Bryan III Roadable" crashed on take-off at about 10:30 a.m. The fatal accident occurred on the third day of the Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) convention at Wittman Field.

The craft that took Bryan's life had been designed and built by him, the pioneer of "Roadables"—aircraft with a single wing that folds up to allow its use for highway driving. Bryan had built two other roadables. The first is in the EAA museum at Hales Corners, Wis. Parts of the second were used to build the craft that crashed Friday.

Rich Demond of Whitmore Lake, Mich., was in position to take off immediately after Bryan on the north-south runway Friday morning. "He took off and it appeared normal," the long-time friend of Bryan's said. Then, when the Roadable was 50-75 feet off the ground, the wing tilted to the left. The left end of the wing hit ground off the side of the runway, and the plane flipped over. Bryan was killed instantly, becoming the first fatality in the 22-year history of EAA conventions.

"Aviation was his life," Demond said of Bryan. "He wanted to make it available for the small man. Less radios and equipment and more eyeball use was his concept." Another concept of Bryan's was a worldwide network of landing strips along major highways. When Roadables caught on as a popular aircraft, Bryan figured, the strips would allow pilots to land in bad weather and proceed along the highways.

Richard Strickhouser of Highland, Mich., called Bryan the "Henry Ford of Roadable aircraft," a few others have been built and flown, but Bryan's was the first that had a folding wing which could stay on the craft during highway use.

It apparently was the folding wing that caused Bryan's death. EAA officials said a bolt had not been put in place, and that caused the crash. A full investigation will be conducted by EAA and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) officials to clear up any questions as to the cause of the crash.

Strickhouser called Bryan "a very fascinating man." They were old friends, and the two and their wives were staying together during the EAA convention at an area motel. They worked together too. Bryan was a project mechanic at the General Motors proving grounds in Milford, Mich. His wife was at the EAA convention with him Friday, but apparently didn't witness the fatal crash. He has three grown daughters.

Bryan has been an EAA member since 1954 according to Paul Poberezny, EAA president. The Michigan flyer brought his Roadable to the convention at Oshkosh last year, and found it always attracted much attention. He was publicized widely in area media, including a feature on a Green Bay television station just a couple of days prior to the crash.

The plane wreckage was stored in a shed at Wittman Field after the crash Friday awaiting inspection by aviation officials. It was described by Demond as being a small, low-winged plane with a wingspan of about 20 feet and a length of slightly more than 20 feet. It was capable of air speeds up to about 150 miles per hour and highway speeds of about 75 miles per hour. It was called "a dream of a lot of people," since few have the technological know-how to build one and fly it.

The convention went on following the crash Friday, and many of the thousands of visitors were unaware anything had happened. Officials of the extremely safety-minded EAA said no changes were planned in the convention schedule, which continues into the middle of next week.

I-57 route to Green Bay gets okay

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The general design for much of a proposed multi-lane highway between Milwaukee and Green Bay has received federal approval, state highway officials reported Friday.

The State Highway Commission, encountering protests from landowners and environmentalists, abandoned plans to cut the highway through the scenic Kettle Moraine and designed it instead along U.S. 141 nearer Lake Michigan.

Despite the delay, the state still hopes the project can win eligibility for government funds under the interstate highway program, and have suggested I-57 or I-43 be its title.

The state Division of Highways said the Federal Highway Administration has approved the state's design from the Green Bay area south to Cedar Grove in Sheboygan County.

The government had approved the general U.S. 141 corridor more than a year ago.

The exact link between Cedar Grove and downtown Milwaukee via Ozaukee County remains indefinite, reflecting Milwaukee opposition to looping the highway west toward Milwaukee

County Stadium rather than using U.S. 141 into Milwaukee's east side.

Approval of the design means bids for the project will probably be let next fall and construction could begin in 1976, the division said. The entire route is expected to be open for traffic in 1980.

The interstate, which will be 90 per cent federally funded, will use the right-of-way of U.S. 141 for about 11 miles of the 51 mile segment from the Sheboygan River to Green Bay, the division said.

Its exact location in Ozaukee County, where environmentalists had feared it might come too close to the Cedarburg bog and ruin that wildlife area, has not yet been determined, a spokesman said.

In Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Brown counties, where the highway does not use U.S. 141 right-of-way, the approved design calls for it to run generally a half-mile west of U.S. 141.

Between Sheboygan and Saukville, U.S. 141 has already been constructed to freeway standards. Original state plans called for the interstate highway to run further west than U.S. 141, at a cost estimated at $25 million more than the route paralleling that highway.

Area local would join Bell strike

With negotiations intensifying in hopes of averting a nationwide strike against the Bell Telephone System set for 11:01 p.m. (CDT) Sunday, it was learned today that the 317 Fox Cities area union members with Wisconsin Telephone Co. voted last Saturday to authorize a strike and they would join the walkout.

If a strike comes, however, the public would continue to have service, at least until lack of maintenance causes problems, because most telephone service is automated. Installation of new phones and repairs on existing equipment would stop.

About 200 members of Local 5500 in Waukesha walked out about 11 a.m. today in what union officials described as an unauthorized move. That local represents over 1,000 clerical and telephone operator personnel in the Milwaukee area.

A 5500 spokesperson said the local president had gone to Waukesha this morning to learn why that unit walked out.

The walkout has affected service in portions of eastern Wisconsin.

Irene Witter, Appleton manager for Wisconsin Telephone Co., said the firm is preparing for the possible strike. Management and supervisory personnel will take over jobs to maintain service "as nearly normal as possible."

William Secor, president of Communications Workers of America, AFL-CIO, Local 5521, would not confirm the vote outcome, but said he was sure the local would strike if the national president, Glenn E. Watts, called for it. Secor said he has received no official word on the strike. Basing his information on what he has read in the news media, Secor said, "At this time, it does look like it, but we still want to be optimistic."

National union president Watts, however, is less optimistic, saying a strike appears to be inevitable. "The hard fact at this time," he said, "is that the union and the companies remain very far apart on the total package." He noted his union's 500,000 members voted in favor of a walkout by a 7-1 ratio.

If there is a strike, another 250,000 workers affiliated with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Alliance of Independent Telephone Unions will join the walkout. Such action would mark the first time that all of the telephone unions have agreed to strike the giant Bell System at the same time.

The unions rejected on July 18 a three-year package that they said amounts to a 30 per cent increase when wages, cost-of-living increases and fringe benefits are counted. The straight wage increase part of the package would have provided increases of 6.5 to 10 per cent the first year and 3.3 per cent the second and third, tied to cost-of-living increases Watts said pay hikes of 14 per cent are needed if telephone workers are to keep pace with inflation and productivity.

The local union represents 317 of the 535 workers at the Appleton area office. These union members range from clerical workers to testers to traffic personnel, plus construction, repair, installation and engineering personnel.

In addition to the wage dispute, which Secor said would mean lower increases for the lower-paid employees, the union is objecting to what it claims is a shift from a strong Bell System pension program to a plan relying more on Social Security for retirees.

Other issues include the company's fighting of the union demand for a full agency shop, wherein nonmembers would be required to pay union dues, and the disagreement on what is called "local money," designed to eliminate inequities in geographic differentials and job classifications. Secor said this area, under the proposed package, would not be keeping up with major urban pay levels.

"If these issues cannot be resolved at the national as well as the local level," Watts said, "a strike is inevitable."

Witter said that if there is a strike, customers of Wisconsin Telephone Co. will get good service if they use their own directories when possible and noted that directory assistance may be slowed during a strike.

Local calls and long distance direct dial calls will not be affected, she said. Noting that "our first obligation is to maintain the quality of service," Witter said that installation of new equipment would be considered on the basis of emergency requirements.

The Appleton area office serves exchanges in Hortonville, Wrightstown, Greenville, Neenah-Menasha, Kaukauna, Kimberly, Combined Locks, Freedom and Little Chute, as well as Appleton, according to Witter.

Local 5521 has completed strike preparations, Secor said, including picketing plans. He noted the local was familiar with strike preparations from past experience. Workers walked off their jobs for one week in the summer of 1971 over a contract dispute and struck for 18 days six years ago. The longer strike led to some maintenance problems because equipment could not be kept up to par.

Negotiations are expected to continue until the walkout deadline. "Our members' expectations are high," Watts said. "What the companies are offering at this time would not reflect their hopes and aspirations."

Current pay for telephone workers ranges from nationwide tops of $166.50 weekly for operators and $260 for craftsmen.

2 youths rescued from waters near High Cliff Park

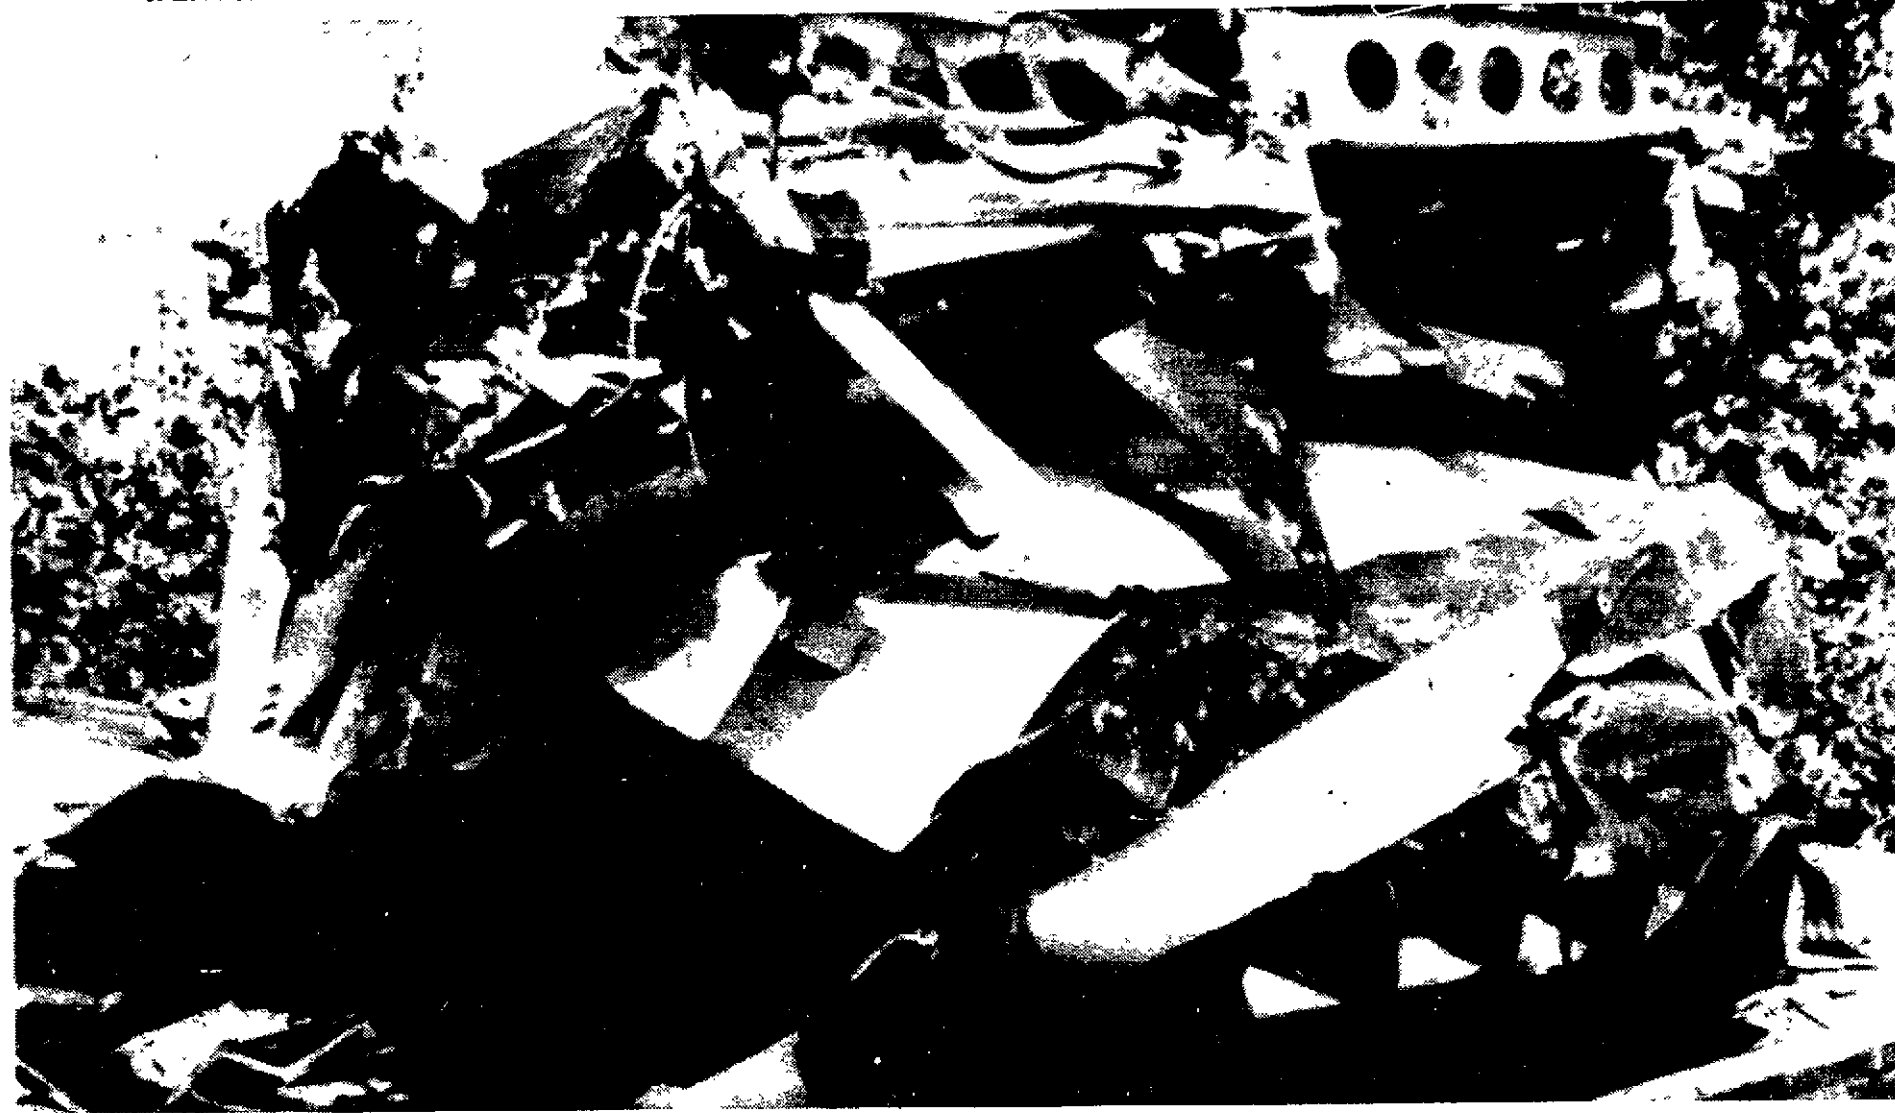

SHERWOOD — Two Kaukauna youths were rescued from Lake Winnebago near High Cliff State Park marina about 4:30 p.m. Thursday when the sail boat they were in capsized during a rain storm. Three rural Menasha girls also in the boat had been able to swim to shore.

The youths were rescued by High Cliff Park personnel with the Department of Natural Resources rescue boat, which had been brought to the marina the day before by DNR Warden Richard Streng, Chilton.

The rescued youth are James Bierslaker, 18, 301 Klein St., Kaukauna, owner of the boat, and Louis Heidel, 17, 215 Taylor St., Kaukauna. The two clung to the craft as the three girls, Joan Dick and Amy and Sue Brantmeier, all route 2, Menasha, swam to shore.

The craft was seen by golfers who notified park authorities.

The incident occurred as one of the youths climbed the mast to take down the sails, it was reported.

Police-society trust necessary

BY MAIJA PENIKIS

Post-Crescent staff writer

Among the most crucial and immediate law enforcement problems facing society today is community-police relations, "but if society expects the policeman to cope with the difficult and complex situation and laws of today, it has the responsibility to give them the proper preparation for that task."

The statement was made Friday by Lt. Gov. Martin Schreiber at the Fox Valley Technical Institute's police academy graduation.

A total of 18 men from 14 law enforcement agencies in the state received their certificates of completion from the 240-hour program for police recruits.

"The President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice has stated that no lasting improvement in law enforcement is likely unless police-community relations are improved," Schreiber said.

This, he added, will take an effort by both communities and police departments. "We must undertake a renewed effort at understanding the rights and duties of citizens and policemen, and we must do it soon."

Schreiber went on to cite from the writings of August Vollman, professor of criminology, who said 40 years ago:

"The policeman is denounced by the public, criticized by preachers, ridiculed in the movies, berated by newspapers and unsupported by prosecuting officers and judges."

"He is shunned by respectables, hated by criminals, deceived by everyone, kicked around by brainless or crooked politicians. He is exposed to countless temptations and dangers, condemned when he enforces the law and dismissed when he doesn't."

"He is supposed to possess the qualifications of soldiers, doctors, lawyers, diplomats and educators with remunerations less than that of a daily laborer."

This summation, Schreiber said, may be tragically as accurate and applicable today as it was 40 years ago.

The state official illustrated his point with statistics involving the deaths, and assaults on policemen, calling this "one of the most dangerous occupations in this country, which does not always receive public support because of the general public's dissatisfaction with crime in the streets."

In short, he said, if people are afraid to walk on the street — and they are — than the feeling is that society does not have adequate law enforcement.

"Something has to give," Schreiber said. "Our current approach hasn't seemed to work. Our police departments must begin to modify their procedures to cope with a changing environment. They must change if the peace officer is again to be viewed by the community as the friendly cop on the beat."

For years, the lieutenant governor stated, society's method of curing crime has been to legislate it off the streets. By passing laws which are hard to enforce, "all we are doing is shifting the problem from the public to the shoulders of patrolmen and police officials."

"These public servants too often become scapegoats from society's inability to confront and resolve deeper problems," he added.

Schreiber said society has a long and difficult task ahead "if we are to achieve the level of dignity and understanding for peace officers that they deserve."

Training programs such as these (FVTI), he said, are in important beginning in the establishment of a closer relationship between police and the people they serve.

"If society expects you to cope with the difficult and complex situations you will face, it has the responsibility to give you proper preparation for that task," he stated.

Schreiber then went on to list the things that society and police can do to improve the operation of this system of law enforcement:

— Promote an adequate salary and benefit package, which would attract quality people;

— Continue to place a very high priority on training programs;

"The increasingly complex challenges faced by police, requiring knowledge of such things as community relations, minority problems, legal principles, laboratory techniques, mob control and human behavior demand that all police be given thorough and frequent training and retraining," Schreiber said.

— Get a better system to process police-community problems to replace the present review board, "which has been labeled a cop-out, impractical, slow and unfair. We have found that rarely does a review board promote good feelings between police and citizens."

Schreiber suggested an ombudsman program consisting of a civilian staff working in conjunction with the police departments for a more equitable system.

Edward Krueger, head of the recruit training program, was presented a plaque in appreciation for his efforts from the class.

The graduates by police departments, are: Terrence S. Carroll, Mark S. Keller, Joseph P. Tranetzke and Ruben O. Villarreal, Appleton;

John F. Trochinski, Berlin; Dennis R. Coe, Bondell; Michael L. Jones, Cuba City; William A. Makowski and Henry O'Neill Jr., Fond du Lac; David J. Otto, Fox Lake; Marshall J. Knutson, Kimberly; Kellan K. Linjer, Manawa; James E. Neville, Marinette; Steven M. Bahr, North Fond du Lac; Ray J. Chasensky Jr., Peshtigo, and James H. Scoville, Town of Menasha.

Sheriff departments represented are: William M. Sauer, Brown County; Stephen A. Meitner, Outagamie County.

A plaque in appreciation for the police recruit training program, conducted by the Fox Valley Technical Institute police academy, was presented to Edward Krueger, right, head of the program, Friday during

Attorney will appeal board's Speener ruling

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

The Outagamie County Health Center Board of Trustees voted 2-1 this morning to deny motions for dismissal of numerous charges against Supt. Eugene K. Speener.

Speener's attorney, Dennis Herring, said he will ask a judge to prohibit next Thursday's public hearing for Speener.

The writ of prohibition probably will be sought from R. Thomas Cane, acting Circuit Court judge for Outagamie County, Herring told reporters. He said he wants the court to act on motions that were denied by trustees.

Trustees John Wylie and Kelland Lathrop voted for denial of the motions. Trustee President Sylvester Esler voted to dismiss the charges brought by two private detectives hired by attorney James Bayorgeon, whom trustees retained last March to investigate Speener in his role as health center chief.

Speener faces charges of misconduct, malfeasance, neglect, inefficiency and dereliction in office.

State law requires that trustees allow Speener a public hearing on the charges before they decide if he should be fired. The hearing is set for 9 a.m. next Thursday in Circuit Court.

Herring, in moving for dismissal of all charges, argued that they were so general he could not prepare a defense to them.

In many instances, he insisted, alleged misconduct was not specified.

One of the charges alleges that Speener was inefficient and neglectful in establishing and administering personnel procedures, to the point that employee morale had deteriorated at the health center.

"What is happy for one person in a working condition might be unhappy for another person," Herring argued. "It depends on whose ox is being gored."

Herring also maintained that Speener is accused of violating rules that should have but never were established by past and present boards of trustees.

He urged that, in a couple of instances, charges instead be lodged against trustees in that they did not carry out their responsibilities in setting up procedures relating to Speener.

Two charges against Speener allege that he gave his accountant, James Mulholland, an unauthorized $125 per month pay raise and that he billed the county for personal, long distance telephone calls.

Herring argued that there has never been any rule or law that prohibited Speener from either of those acts.

The first thing trustees should have done, Herring argued, was to set up a complete set of rules for Speener so he knew what he could and could not do.

"The more I look at this whole thing, the more I think it's totally out of whack," Herring complained.

Esler, who has stood by Speener in the year-long controversy surrounding Speener's administration of the health center, agreed with Herring that Speener had no rules to follow.

Bayorgeon agreed that former boards of trustees probably hadn't done their job, "but two wrongs don't make a right," he added.

Bloodmobile meeting set in Manawa

MANAWA — A kickoff meeting to plan for the annual visit of the Badger Regional Bloodmobile is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday at city hall.

All chairmen and recruiters are asked to be present to make arrangements for the bloodmobile visit that will take place from noon to 5:30 p.m. Aug. 28 at the Manawa Middle School gymnasium. The quota is 141 pints.

Mrs. Robert Wegener and Mrs. Melvin Pethke are general cochairmen. Scheduling chairman is Mrs. Harvey Rosenau.

The recruitment committee includes Mrs. Gerald Sabrowsky, chairman; Mrs. Edgar Hornburg, Mrs. Leonard Marcy, Mrs. Charles Nelson and Mrs. Rudolph Sedlac.

Mrs. Leonard Goetz will head the nurses and aides volunteers; Mrs. Walter Wandtke, typists and escorts; Mrs. William Ewert, juice and kitchen helpers; Mrs. George Jensen and Mrs. Frank Binder, kitchen.

The publicity committee is Mrs. Kenneth Keenlance, posters; Mrs. Melvin Pethke, church bulletins, Mrs. Edmund Facklam, mimeograph materials, Mrs. Clarence Klotzbuecher, radio and television; Charles Okonski and Mrs. Russell Diehl, newspapers.

Lucey to spend Monday touring Calumet County

CHILTON — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey will be in Calumet County Monday, touring the area and meeting with constituents.

Lucey will arrive at the New Holstein airport and will be greeted there at a morning coffee before going on to the Hotel Chilton where he will meet with constituents from 10:30 to 11 a.m. He will next tour a dairy farm and have lunch at Michels of Brillion.

Later in the afternoon he will tour several plants in the Brillion area.

Members of the Calumet County Democratic Party are making arrangements for the visit.

2 area youths at rodeo in Tomah

MARION — Two young persons from the Fox Valley will participate as contestants in the National High School Rodeo which opens Monday at the Monroe County Fairgrounds at Tomah. It will run through Aug. 11.

Mark Rivers, route 1, Manawa, won two firsts at the Wisconsin High School Rodeo at Richland Center in July, which qualifies him for competition at the national contest. Mark also competed in the national finals last year. He will compete in boy's calf roping and daily team roping.

David Miller, 122 Ellen Lane, Appleton, also will enter the national competition. He won a second place in bull riding in state competition. All of the top three winners in the 13 categories in state competition are eligible to compete in the national contest.

The Little Wolf High School marching band will participate in the parade Aug. 10. Rivers is a 1974 graduate of the high school.

The National High School Rodeo is dubbed the world's largest rodeo, with 87,000 expected to attend next week, according to John Hudson, Sparta, who heads the program this year.

There are 28 states and two Canadian provinces participating in the event which has a membership of 9,048. This is the only time in the next 30 years that the national finals will be held in Wisconsin.

Championship professional rodeo stock will be used in the finals. The top 15 contestants in each event will compete for national honors Aug. 11.

Clintonville subdivision utility work progressing

CLINTONVILLE — Three separate subdivisions on the south side of Clintonville, all linked by city utilities, now have sanitary sewer lines and water mains connecting each of them to the city, and a storm sewer connection in nearly completed.

The three are Floral Acres, Parkview Heights and Park Terrace, totaling to about 80 acres.

Floral Acres is a housing subdivision just southwest of the Clintonville municipal swimming pool. One of the three cul-de-sacs has been roughed in and construction has begun there with three homes already erected.

By the end of summer, all of the three cul-de-sacs which abut Morning Glory Drive will have curbs and gutters.

Parkview Heights has the appearance of a mobile park with half of its main street — Flora Way — ready for blacktopping this summer and the other half of the circular street will be getting curbs and gutters this summer. Park Terrace is a small subdivision off County Trunk I, just to the south of Parkview Heights. There is now one mobile home.

Martin Brothers of Clintonville have been installing curbs and gutters, and Ted Coppens Construction Company, Appleton, has been working on the sewers and mains.

Director Basil Arvey, of public works for the city, commented that a wet spring slowed down the crews, but with the good weather, he expects all the work to be done by the end of summer. It was necessary to remove a large number of boulders from the land. Because of the topography there and the fact that storm sewers have to be laid to permit gravity to pull the water toward the city, the storm sewer serving the southside subdivision had to be dropped 16 feet beneath the surface at the far north end of the subdivision.

About 3,000 feet of 15-inch storm sewer, some 2,500 feet of 8-inch sanitary sewer, and about 2,500 feet of water mains have been laid this summer.

Morning Glory Drive is the main street in the subdivision, and traveling south on it, there are three cul-de-sacs to the left (Primrose, Pansy and Petunia). Morning Glory veers to the right and ends. When completed, the street will circle to the north and link three more cul-de-sacs.

Branching off Morning Glory is Floral Way to the left and lining either side of the street are about 55 mobile home lots of which about 24 are occupied. Floral Way circles around and meets Ginger Spur, which is a street between Morning Glory and County Trunk I.

Police and Fire

KAUKAUNA — Harvey Kobussen, Kimberly, operator of the Family Bar, Tenth Street, reported to police that someone entered the tavern after it closed early Thursday morning and stole $80 from a cigar box in a drawer behind the bar, two pints of brandy and a police scanner radio.

Marion to be 'roasted' to kick off homecoming event

SHERWOOD — "The Corn Roasting of Marion" will kick off the homecoming weekend activities for the city, at 8 p.m. Friday in the high school gym.

The program is patterned after the Dean Martin Comedy Hour, in which a celebrity is roasted by his or her colleagues.

In this case, Mayor William Bertram, along with two former mayors, Herman Spiegel and Cecil Welch, will sit in the hot seat. Master of ceremonies will be Tom Hurley of De Pere.

Former residents are planning to return to take part in the program.

Ken Halpop, now of Mineral Point, will return for the event. Steve Borm, Madison, who worked on the pond renovation, will tell stories of those days; Fred Cannizzo, Brookfield, brother-in-law of Bertram, will talk of family involvements.

Also participating will be Frank Sinkewitz, former mayor of Clintonville, who will discuss the top city office.

People from the community who will take part in the presentation will be Murray Meyer, Jean Fritz, Lyle Henschel, Floyd Brandenburg, Dede Fleetwood, Hank Bowers, Jim Nolan, Germaine Rulseh, Leonard Morley, Trudy Marquardt, and Byron Beversdorf.

Soloist will be Mrs. Vaughn James. Other musical numbers will be presented by the Corn Roasting Singers. The group, composed of high school students, includes Terri Bohr, Bill Daley, Helen Anderson, Tim McGinnis, Tracy Byers and Jeff Quandt.

Tickets may be purchased from the members of the Marion Woman's Club. Co-chairmen are Mrs. Larry Schuster and Mrs. Lee Kersten. Admission is 75 cents for adults and 50 cents for children under 12.

Baseball tournament to open in New London

NEW LONDON — Regular season games for boys playing in four leagues have ended, and the teams are preparing to play in the annual tournament. Championship games will be played at Hatten Stadium Aug. 14.

The American, National and T-Leagues will have single elimination tournaments, while the Major League will have a double elimination.

In Major League play, the champion Padres (8-2) will face the White Sox (5-5) Monday, and the Dodgers (6-4) will meet the Red Sox (1-9) Tuesday.

The champion Angels (9-1) will play the Yankees (5-5) to open tournament play for the National League Monday, while the Twins (6-4) will face the Mets.

The Astros draw a bye for opening round play Tuesday, and the Athletics (8-2) meet the Indians (1-9).

In T-League play Monday, the Crusaders (10-0) face the Badgers (4-6), and the Seals (7-3) meet the Bears (2-8) Tuesday. The Falcons (5-5) play the Otters (1-9) and the Gophers (9-1) meet the Cats (2-8).

American League play starts with the Tigers (10-0) meeting the Wolves (6-4), the Panthers (8-2) playing the Hawks (2-8) and the Foxes (4-6) taking on the Beavers (1-9) Monday. Tuesday American League play pits the Jays (3-7) against the Colts (8-2), the Cubs (1-9) against the Cobras (4-6) and the Lions (8-2) with a bye.

New London board of education to discuss budget limitations

NEW LONDON — Proposed changes in the 1974-75 operational budget will be discussed when the board of education conducts a special meeting at 8 p.m. Monday.

The changes, which will total less than $800, will be proposed to allow anticipated cost increases for bus maintenance.

In other business, the board plans to discuss the possibility of conducting a needs assessment of the school system. If approved, it would include a lengthy study of school district projections and future needs.

The board also will have an executive session to discuss personnel and personnel policies, and will again open the meeting after the closed session.

Clintonville slowpitch tournament this weekend

CLINTONVILLE — The slowpitch softball league will sponsor a double elimination tournament at the Bucholtz Park diamonds this weekend. Tournaments began Friday night with 15 teams of less than 30 members and five teams of more than 30 members competing. Games continue tonight with the championship contests scheduled for Sunday.

There is no admission charge, and refreshments and food will be served at the park.

Three swim Mackinac Straits for charity

SAINT IGNACE, Mich. (AP) — A Grand Haven man and two of his children swam across the Mackinac Straits Friday night to raise money for the Red Cross.

Bob DeWese, his 19-year-old son Paul, and Ruth DeWese Headl, 22, collected pledges of donations to the Red Cross before making the swim, but said they didn't know how much they made.

They said they expect friends will kick in more donations later.

The 46-year-old DeWese, who works for the Muskegon County sheriff's department, finished the five-miles-plus route across a stiff current in about three hours and 20 minutes, about 45 minutes behind his children.

Shiny midget plane draws crowds at EAA fly-in

BY MARY JO HIBBERT
Post-Crescent staff writer

OSHKOSH — Most of the 300,000 people who are expected to visit the Experimental Aircraft Association's 22nd annual fly-in this week and next at Wittman Field here spend as much time watching the planes on the ground as they do the planes in the air. Some planes always attract crowds because they're big, old, historic, remarkably tiny or unusually built and decorated. Frequently, the warbirds collection of World War II fighter planes attracts the biggest spectator crowds, but at Wittman Field Thursday, the Butler Midget

Mustang seemed to be in the spotlight.

The crowd around the shiny aluminum plane, polished so brightly that people could see themselves in its almost mirror-like surface, just didn't let up. Small children, foreign visitors and especially other pilots and plane builders came to admire and inquire about the small plane belonging to Lloyd L. Butler, Norwalk, Ohio.

The Midget Mustang earned Butler grand champion honors in its class at last year's EAA convention. This year, the plane's still getting all the attention deserving of its championship rank.

Like many of the pilots of smaller planes who belong to the EAA, Butler built his plane himself. It took six years to build the Mustang, which measures 18 feet, 10 inches from wing tip to wing tip. Butler flew his first test flight in May, 1973. Although the venture cost Butler $2,700, he explained that the figure is remarkably low, considering the amount some plane builders put into their work.

The plane weighs 694 pounds empty and maintains a 160 mile per hour cruising speed. However, in competition Thursday morning, Butler clocked what his fellow pilots termed an "impressive" 216 m.p.h. Boasting a sleek line, accomplished "by eye, imagination and an air hammer," the top speed of the plane has been recorded at 230 m.p.h.

"This plane is made to go fast," the 54-year-old machinist, who started flying as a hobby in 1943, explained. "And it's better than fun. It's a sensation that no one could possibly imagine unless he'd actually experienced it. For some of us, it becomes a way of life. Just like these fly-ins do."

Catholic groups applaud ordination of 11 women by Episcopalian bishops

BY GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Reformist Roman Catholic groups have applauded the ordination of 11 women as priests of the Episcopal Church, but the presiding bishop of the women's own church deplores it.

It was "contrary to the constitution and canons of the church," the Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, the top Episcopal prelate said in a statement Tuesday.

He added that the four bishops who officiated at the regulation-defying ordinations in Philadelphia Monday "exceeded their authority and have not acted for the church, as is the norm in ordinations."

"Accordingly, the ordinations are irregular, and may be found invalid," he added.

At the same time, bishops of the women's home dioceses moved to suspend them from the ministry, or otherwise prohibit them from exercising any priestly function.

On the other hand, messages of commendations came from two reformist Roman Catholic groups which advocate admission of women to the priesthood in that church.

The U.S. section of St. Joan's International Alliance, a Catholic group working for equal participation of women in church affairs, said it rejoiced at the ordination of the Episcopal women.

Commending the bishops who carried out the ritual, Bernice McNeela, of Waukegan, Ill., said in a message to Bishop Allin:

"We trust that the courageous action of these bishops and women will move authorities in all churches to examine and correct attitudes, regulations and laws which deprive women of their rights and responsibilities as baptized Christians."

"Justice requires that all churches, as well as society in general, cease their discrimination against women."

The Episcopal Church, along with the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox churches, traces its line of ministerial authority back to the time of Jesus' apostles in what is called the "apostolic succession."

The National Association of Laity, a Catholic group advocating church renewal and reform, also commended the ordination of the Episcopal women, saying they "have with courage and dignity steadfastly prepared to answer the call to serve the Christian community as priests."

The step "will inspire Catholic laity to redouble their efforts to reduce ecclesiastical discrimination within the Catholic church," said Joseph T. Skehan, of Bloomsburg, Pa., president of the NAL.

Bishop Allin, in his statement, said diocesan bishops where the 11 women live are bound to restrict them "from exercising any priestly function."

Meanwhile, the diocesan bishops — in Minneapolis, Syracuse, N.Y.; Richmond, Va.; Philadelphia, New York

City, Newark, N.J.; Rochester, N.Y.; and Kansas City, Mo. — have said they were taking such action.

The Rev. M. Joseph Hirsch of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer in the Kansas City suburb of Platte Woods flew the flag at the church upside down and at half staff Tuesday to protest the ordination.

"This was the only way I could think of to show my personal disgust with the illegal ordination that took place Monday in Philadelphia," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Hirsch said women are not proper subjects to the sacrament. "Therefore they cannot be validly ordained anyway, anymore than you can validly consecrate Coca-Cola and potato chips in place of bread and wine in the church. I myself prefer scotch and whisky to wine, but I can't put that on the altar and call it the blood of Christ."

65 graduates of Seminex are placed

Congregations in 27 of the 38 districts of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod have accepted pastoral candidates from Seminex.

Latest statistics indicated that 65 candidates have been placed and an additional 28 are discussing opportunities for calls.

The Rev. Karl Reko, director of placement, said it appears likely that all Seminex pastoral candidates will be placed by the end of the summer.

He also said 38 of the 65 called expect to be ordained before the end of summer. Others will be received through the rites of "investiture" and "commissioning."

The Rev. J.A.O. Preus, synod president, has attempted to block the placement of Seminex pastoral candidates because they have not been certified by the faculty of a regular seminary of the synod.

Recently the synodical president sent letters to congregations and district officials involved in placement, threatening them with possible disciplinary action if they called Seminex graduates.

Centennial picnic set Sunday at St. Martin Church in Clintonville

CLINTONVILLE — As part of the centennial observance this year, St. Martin Lutheran Church will have an outdoor service and picnic Sunday at W.A. Olen Park here.

There will be only one worship service at 10 a.m. in the grandstand. The Minutemen from Marion will play for the service and provide entertainment in the afternoon.

Participants are asked to bring their own picnic lunches. Beverages and ice cream will be available on the grounds. Everyone is asked to come in casual clothes because the picnic will begin right after the service.

Harland Kirchner is in charge of the picnic. John Busse will head the games and softball committee; Charles Krueger, the fish pond activities; and Jackson McConley, the food, and beverage stands. Franklin Goetsch will be in charge of the pony rides and Oward Kauth, the VFW merry-go-round.

'Dayspring' will sing

Ten youths, known as "Dayspring," will present a concert at 7 p.m. Monday at First English Lutheran Church. The gospel through folk and contemporary music will make up most of the program, which is open to the public.

Xerox agrees to withdraw population control booklet

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. — Xerox Corp. has agreed to withdraw from distribution a booklet on population control after a Catholic civil rights group here threatened legal action for alleged anti-Catholic statements in the booklet.

Entitled "Population Control," the booklet contains a section on the Pope's views on birth control, which the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights claimed defamed Pope Paul VI.

The booklet, meant for classroom use, asks at the end of the section if the students would support a move to "bring the church before a world court or another international tribunal to be tried for crimes against humanity."

Immediately after that, the booklet

Tietjen hearing set Aug. 30 by Concordia board

ST. LOUIS — The faculty committee of the board of control of Concordia Seminary has set Aug. 30 for the hearings on Dr. John H. Tietjen to determine the validity of charges made against his suspension as president of the major seminary.

Two pastors, one of whom is the Rev. Leonard P. Buelow of Green Bay, presented formal charges of false doctrine and malfeasance against Tietjen to the board last November. He eventually was suspended from office, pending the outcome of investigation of those charges.

The board authorized its legal counsel to acquire a special advisory legal counsel experienced in constitutional law and ethics. It is expected that this counsel will be named within a few days.

Appleton girl attends Christian Science youth convention in Boston

Cindy Rammage, daughter of Charles Rammage, 1627 N. Edgewood Drive, Appleton, is attending the international youth meeting for Christian Scientists this week in Boston.

Approximately 7,000 young people from throughout the world are taking part in the convention. The theme is, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?"

There are 67 branches of the Mother Church in Wisconsin and 3,200 branches altogether. Also numbered in the ranks are 550 Christian Science college organizations in 54 countries. Eleven of them are in Wisconsin.

West Bloomfield school centennial, dedication services set Aug. 18

WEST BLOOMFIELD — Centennial observances of the founding of Christ Lutheran Day School will be combined with the dedication of the new school Aug. 18.

The observance will feature the Rev. C.H. Clausting, Oconomowoc, former pastor of the congregation. He will preach at the 10 a.m. centennial worship. A fellowship dinner will be served at 11 a.m.

The dedication service will be at 2 p.m. The school cost $90,000 and houses classrooms for kindergarten through grade 8.

MANITOWOC, Wis. (AP) — Over 300 delegates from Wisconsin, Upper Michigan and Canada will attend the 29th biennial convention of the Northern Wisconsin district of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod Monday through Wednesday.

The Rev. Waldemar Zink of Coleman, Wis., will preach at the opening service Monday. The main convention essay will be given Tuesday morning by Prof. Wilbert Gawrich of the Wisconsin Lutheran Seminary in Mequon, Wis.

St. Patrick, Stephenville, anniversary plans finalized

STEPHENVILLE — St. Patrick Catholic Church members have finalized plans for the roundup and 125th anniversary observance Aug. 9-11 on the church grounds.

Roy Komp is general chairman. Tony Lauer is in charge of the "Brothers of the Bush" and Mrs. Harold Suprise is in charge of the "Sisters of the Bustle."

In charge of the dinner and dining area are Mrs. Edward Bohman, Mrs. Harold Otis, Mrs. Ben Young Sr. and Mrs. Anthony Bohman.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wege Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. William Siewert will head the roundup parade at 2 p.m. Aug. 11. That will be followed by a greased pig contest, under the chairmanship of Edward Bohman and Marilyn Kettner.

Others heading the various committees are Mrs. Alvin Braun, ticket promotion; Mrs. Robert Foertsch and Mrs. Harold Suprise, craft booth; Mrs.

Nell Koepl and Mrs. Henry Van Straten, country store; Mrs. Robert Koleske and Mrs. Alois Van Camp, hamburger stand, and Mrs. Robert Prunty and Mrs. Alfred Riojas, the pop stand.

William Bohman and Tony Lauer Jr., are chairmen of the beer tent and music, featuring a live band.

Cashiers are Robert Koleske and Leonard Tennie. Tennie will take care of security; Vernice Lapp, maintenance, and Robert Prunty, the dunk tank.

A chicken and beef dinner will be served from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and from 4 to 6 p.m. Aug. 11.

The event will be kicked off the evening of Aug. 9 with a country and western show. A miscellaneous auction is planned for 2 p.m. Aug. 10. A queen will be crowned that evening.

The highlights on the final day will include a beard contest in the afternoon and an Irish jig contest at 6 p.m.

Skin cancers have to be watched closely

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know more about two types of cancer. I have had two removed from my lip called leukoplakia, and one on my forehead named actinic keratosis.

I am worried and want to know if this type of cancer can be controlled. Should I go to a cancer clinic? I am getting more spots on my face. — F.H.

No, I don't think you need to seek out any special clinic. I also suspect you may be more upset than you need to be — not that these spots shouldn't be watched if and as they appear. But I doubt if they are as dangerous to you as you seem to fear.

Leukoplakia is the white thickening of the membrane lining of the mouth and lips (and can appear on other mucous surfaces, too). It is due to chronic irritation — smoking, heat of the smoke, jagged teeth, etc.

Not all patches of leukoplakia are cancerous. Rather, they are regarded as potentially precancerous. They may develop into cancer. In advanced cases, they can become quite thick, may have fissures (cracks) or may ulcerate. At that stage, they possess a strong possibility of becoming cancerous and, of course, need to be removed.

Mild, faint patches of leukoplakia may, however, disappear if the irritation is removed.

Hence the rule is to watch such spots, and if your doctor or dentist sees suspicious changes, remove them.

Actinic keratoses are skin cancers due to excessive exposure to the sun, not uncommon in people who are outdoors a great deal — farmers, sportsmen, other outdoor workers, sun-worshippers.

These should be removed. But keep this in mind: They are visible; they are accessible; they can be seen in their early stages and removed easily before they have had a chance to spread.

When they are removed, a laboratory test will determine whether they actually contain any cancer cells.

When your skin shows a tendency to develop such spots, by all means have them watched; but at the same time, have high confidence that they can be removed before they really endanger you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know why I get a nose bleed whenever I eat or drink any kind of chocolate. I never have them otherwise. — M.M.

Frankly, I don't know, but it is possible that some of the physicians who see this column may be able to send me an explanation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a miscarriage a year and a half ago when I was 18. I was in the hospital two days.

We would like to have children. Could you tell me the best time for becoming pregnant? Is it possible that after a miscarriage it will be difficult to become pregnant again — Mrs. I.C.M.

The most probable cause of difficulty occurs if some of the tissues remain clinging to the uterus after a miscarriage, but these can be readily removed by a technique called a D. and C. or "dilation and curettage." Some physicians even favor a D. and C. as a routine procedure after a miscarriage to guard against that possibility. You might discuss it with your doctor if you didn't have one.

Best time — really the only time — to become pregnant is at the time of ovulation, which ordinarily occurs just about half way between the beginning of one period and the beginning of the next one. If you have an average 28-day cycle, ovulation usually occurs 14 to 16 days before your next period is due.

Is angina pectoris dangerous? Is there a cure? If you would like to learn more about this heart condition, write to Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy of his booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents. Allow four to six weeks for delivery.

Political ethics elsewhere

The development of state government policy tends to appear to be insular, to the extent that what is going on in 49 other state capitols is rarely communicated to the citizens, the opinion makers and the decision makers of most other state jurisdictions. Thus it has been lately on the numerous issues involving morality in government and ethical standards felt to be necessary and prudent for the conduct of politicians and the operation of government at all levels.

These columns have commented with approval about recent departures in state statutory policy in Wisconsin relating to controls of the use of money to influence the electorate, and the assurance of democratic conduct in the operations of state and local government, as in our strengthened anti-secrecy law applying to all governmental operations in Wisconsin. And, not least, are the new requirements for the disclosure of the general financial status of the men and women who hold public offices to prevent conflicts of private and public interest as governmental affairs intrude ever more deeply into private concerns.

These are good and progressive developments. But we must resist the temptation to assume that they were original, that they are peculiarly Wisconsin inventions, although our standards of public integrity have doubtless been superior to those of many other jurisdictions including those of some of our close neighbors such as Illinois.

Some of the new statutory safeguards recently enacted elsewhere in the country, in fact, are somewhat more demanding than those we have put into effect in our own state. They were responses to public apprehension. In some instances they were angrily resisted. In the state of Washington, for example, some of the state officers serving on parttime offices for nominal remuneration, and sometimes none, challenged a financial interest disclosure law on the ground that it was an invalid invasion of privacy.

Some of those complaints were heard in Wisconsin too, but it is useful to note that there have been no such resignations in protest, nor has there been the wholesale invasion of peeping political toms of the file rooms of the state ethics board that some of the faint-hearted had forecast. Moreover, the United States supreme court has upheld the constitutional validity of such requirements for men and women holding public place.

What we have learned, taking developments in many state capitols into account, is that lawmakers everywhere are responding to the profound disillusionment about political morality in America. It has been a painful, bitter, baleful experience. But out of it will come, we are entitled to hope, a more sanitary, responsive and democratic political structure everywhere, from the courthouse to the statehouse to the White House, in the campaign stump litany.

The real winner in Cyprus

The truce agreement reached for Cyprus was worked out through a troika arrangement among Turkey, Greece and England with the United States giving long distance telephone advice. But the victory was Turkey's and the defeat was that of the former military government of Greece and its Cypriot lackeys.

The military agreement, including a cease fire, calls for Turkish troop reductions and implies at least that the presence of any Turkish troops, except as advisors to the Turkish Cypriot force, is only temporary. Buffer zones are to be set up between Greek and Turkish Cypriot enclaves. And there are to be further conferences on the political future of the island republic. This will mean a reconsideration of the Cypriot constitution and the future responsibilities of Greece, Turkey and Britain who in 1960 guaranteed Cypriot independence.

Apparently the Greek colonels aided and abetted and perhaps even planned the coup that temporarily threw out the government on Cyprus and replaced it for a few days with a puppet group dedicated to union with Greece. But their coup came in no uncertain terms from the nearby and far stronger Turks. Turkish military forces landed on Cyprus and reportedly bombed and strafed the civilian population as well as the rebels. There was no alternative to war for the Greek military junta except capitulation with as much face saving as possible. So the colonels called back a civilian regime and withdrew support from the Cypriot rebels who promptly collapsed.

Yet in the long run perhaps the people of Greece were the real victors. At least they got rid of a tyrannical government while Turkey must still contend with something far less than a democracy.

Cambodian children need help

Four and a half years ago, before the Indochinese war came so actively to Cambodia, there were about 600,000 people living in the capital, Phnom Penh. Now there are more than two million, about a third of the population of the whole country. And a great many of them are homeless children.

The major and most pitiful victims of any war are the innocent, the youngsters made orphans and beggars by the foolishness and frailties of their elders. They have literally clogged the streets of Saigon and other cities of South Vietnam for a long time. Those in Cambodia are not as clever or as inured to cruelty yet as the Saigon orphans. Perhaps they suffer even more.

Most of them beg in order to stay alive. Others pick pockets, snatch food from restaurants, sell themselves as prostitutes. Some manage to patch bicycle tires or shine shoes to earn a few meagre riels. Almost all are undernourished, withdrawn, fearful and with the pain and rashes of deficient diets. Strangely enough, according to Brother Andrew who hopes to open a sidewalk shelter for them, "they come with one tremendous asset, the ability to survive." Very likely those who lacked the will perished long ago.

The United States is not solely to blame for their plight of course. The Communist guerrillas, both Cambodian and Vietnamese, have driven them from their villages and often killed their parents. Their own leadership has been weak and vacillating and corrupt. But the American invasion of Cambodia brought the war much more harshly to Cambodians. American funds, the primary source of welfare aid for Cambodian refugees, is small compared with American military aid that helps keep the war going. Maybe our priorities in Asia still are all mixed up.

Froehlich acts with dignity in trying situation

MADISON — When stocky, diligent and determined Harold Froehlich, age 30, was sworn in as a member of the Wisconsin Assembly 12 years ago, the small and select audience of professional politicians, bureaucrats, lobbyists and journalists on hand marked him as a young man with a future.

Possessor of degrees in both law and accounting, newly-elected Republican representative of one of the "safest" legislative districts in a traditionally Republican state, veteran of the youth wing of his party, with a quiet self-assurance that had been generated by his bootstrap rise as the son of a widowed mother, Froehlich surveyed his new situation and determined to succeed.

His legislative career was virtually a model of the opportunities available for the young legislator who understands the trade of politics, the limitation of many contemporaries, and the value of a one-party home district constituency that provides security for the energetic and enterprising representative. Two years later, he became chairman of the Republican majority caucus. Four years later, he became speaker of the Assembly when his party recovered from what was then thought to be a temporary interruption of its habitual majority status in legislative affairs.

Like so many other Wisconsin representatives in the Congress over the years, Froehlich found his state legislative experience and reputation invaluable when the long-time incumbent representative of his congressional district abruptly decided two years ago to retire. Without his state Capitol apprenticeship, Froehlich could not have reasonably aspired to the national office, even as most of the present and past Wisconsin delegations could not have been seriously considered without the priceless advantage of the state legislative chamber as a training school.

But unlike the scores of other state legislators who have gone on to the national legislative chambers over the years, Froehlich as the marginal winner in his freshman term was confronted with a political crisis the dimensions of which no contemporary Wisconsin politician has faced.

It is not to denigrate Rep. Robert Kastemeier, the 2nd District Wisconsin Democrat who is also a member of the House Judiciary Committee advancing the articles of impeachment against President Nixon, to observe that his situation is far less hazardous. The Kastemeier district is overwhelmingly Democratic. If there was any risk for him, it derived from the fact that some of the most influential of the liberal forces of his constituency might have become impatient with the postponement of his own decision in the presidential impeachment proceedings on the committee.

The Froehlich position was altogether different. He won the narrowest congressional election in decades in his once strongly Republican district. The constituency had been significantly reshuffled two years ago. Surely he has not yet been able to build up the personal following of his Wisconsin colleagues.

Even without direct and crucial involvement in the most serious constitutional crisis in the lifetimes of most Americans, Froehlich would have faced the most difficult campaign of his life as he was expertly aware.

He did not seek what has turned out to be his historically significant seat on the Judiciary Committee. He was persuaded that his service could be most useful there.

What must surely have been an anguished decision has been taken with dignity. His Democratic challengers and opponents have been restrained, but they could probably do no less. The entire Wisconsin political community debates the point: Would he have gained or lost by resisting the impeachment articles? To say that his dilemma was beyond solution is redundant. His hope must be that his new constituency accepts his decision as a matter of conscience in the face of risks that no contemporary Wisconsin public figure has confronted.

American climbers plan assault on Lenin peak

By the Associated Press

A team of 19 American mountain climbers has journeyed to the Central Asian republic of Kirghizia where they plan to scale the 23,405-foot Lenin Peak, third highest mountain in the Soviet Union.

The climbers have been training for the ascent on 14,410-foot Mount Rainier in the state of Washington.

It marks the first time an American team has been permitted to try a major ascent in the USSR. Part of the expedition plans to try a route that has not been scaled before. Other members will concentrate on the north ridges which have been climbed on previous occasions.

The United States and nine other nations are represented in a mountaineering camp set up in the Glade of the Edelweiss at a level of 12,000 feet in the Alai valley.

The Americans will operate independently, but the Soviet Mountaineering Federation has offered advisory and base-camp support. Among other groups expected to attempt Lenin Peak is an all-woman Russian team.

The U.S. expedition which is headed up by Peter C. Schoening, a 46-year-old chemical executive from Bothell, Wash., is traveling by small plane and truck in the rugged Pamir country. The team plans to spend about a month climbing in the Pamirs. It includes an airline pilot, a travel agent, a college professor and a carpenter. There are two women in the group.

Lenin Peak is situated on the border between the Tadzhik and Kirghiz republics. First climbed in 1928 by a Soviet-German team, it was until the 1930s thought to be the Soviet Union's highest peak. Later, however, it was found to be less lofty than Communism Peak, formerly Stalin Peak, and Victory Peak also in Central Asia.

The current U.S. effort to scale Lenin Peak represents the first full-scale display of cooperation between Soviet and American alpinists. The U.S. team is being sponsored by the American Alpine Club.

Congress using double standard

A dissent, if I may, from the praise heaped upon Congress in the last week for its manner of impeaching the President. Despite my lack of affection for Mr. Nixon's Disneyland style of government, his overthrow rests on a clear foundation of partisanship.

Consider one simple chain of thought: Mr. Nixon's dirty linen has been dragged into light by more than 18 months of Congressional investigation and Special Prosecutorial activities. Even now, the President's Watergate hush money guilt is not entirely clear, and he is being pulled down as much if not more by the collective evidence of White House power used for seamy political purposes. And the technical genesis of this evidence is that Watergate gave the Congressional Democratic majority a publicly-approved reason to go on a fishing expedition. Without all of the smelly smaller fish that turned up in the net, even the rotten mackerel of Watergate probably wouldn't have sufficed for impeachment.

An opposition congress

In my opinion, the impeachment of Richard Nixon will not lay down a new standard of across-the-board behavior for U.S. Chief Executives. Conceivably, the only men who need fear this emerging precedent are presidents who face an opposition Congress. Remember that back in 1964, Lyndon Johnson was able to scuttle any serious Congressional investigation of the Bobby Baker incident. No White House aides were forced to testify, no serious digging was ever done — all because the Senate was of the same party as the president, and mindful of party politics. If Lyndon Johnson's White House had been subjected to the scrutiny imposed on Richard Nixon's, it would have yielded a myriad of similar (or worse) abuses, and I think that most Americans know this.

Thus, the patriotic, reformist oratory of men like Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter Rodino and ranking Committee member Jack Brooks leaves me cynical. Neither contemplated the impeachment of LBJ or any previous President (Brooks was one of Lyndon Johnson's closest allies, and presumably knows many 1963-68 episodes of the vintage he finds so uniquely abhorrent and impeachable in Richard Nixon). Nor am I especially impressed with the Republicans who find it politically useful to string along with the majority.

Years ago, on the floor of the United States Senate, spoilsman Roscoe Conkling of New York took a marvelous jab at the pretensions of the pseudo-good governmentals: "Who are these men who, in newspapers and elsewhere, are cracking their whips over Republicans and playing schoolmaster to the Republican Party and its conscience and convictions? ... They are wolves in sheep's clothing. Their real object is office and plunder. When Dr. Johnson defined patriotism as the last refuge of a scoundrel, he was unconscious of the then undeveloped capabilities and uses of the word 'Reform.'"

The double standard

Conkling's criticism is not without contemporary relevance to the House Judiciary Committee. But having said this, my regret is that Mr. Nixon is not a Prime Minister so that he could be forced out of office by a Republican caucus (which would probably have asked him to step down a year or so ago). It is the hypocrisy of the Democrats and the double standard of impeachment that I find offensive, not the loss of Mr. Nixon and his entourage.

To this end, it would be useful if public pressure forced the House of Representatives to design a nonpartisan impeachment mechanism automatically triggered by a certain number of petitioners and allegations. Such a unit should be equipped to obtain and weigh evidence on a non-party basis, and then report to the full House. Only this manner of investigation can insure evenhanded treatment of Presidents with and without majority support in Congress.

The Iron Company is still manufacturing pig iron, although the margin on it is small, and the market generally is well stocked. It is undeniably true that the Blast Furnaces alone are not as promotive to the prosperity of the city or county as they would be if the iron made by them could be worked up into articles of daily demand, right at home.

It is not necessary to dwell upon reasons, so well known to all our local readers.

The question is how to change all this state of affairs? How to work up this product in a manner to give a large amount of employment to labor, and to promote the general prosperity?

Nail Works can be established with a reasonable sum of capital. In this way, the iron made here can be utilized to advantage, and a mutual advantage derived therefrom.

Telephone official responds to letter in People's Forum

"In general, telephone companies have no authority to assert their moral judgment over that of someone else," a Wisconsin Telephone Co. spokesman reported today.

The response was prompted by a letter in the People's Forum of the Sun-Tay Post-Crescent. The letter criticized telephone companies for allowing a Kansas City, Mo., photo studio to deliver a suggestive, two-minute recorded announcement advertising its nude models.

The letter writer had been billed for the calls which a teen-age daughter and her friends had placed, thinking the call was on a toll-free number. The confusion exists because the area code for the studio is 816; toll-free numbers are 800.

The concerned Neenah parent wrote, "I feel it is obscene. I suppose it will only be a matter of time before the numbers in phone books will be rated PG or R, the same as movies."

The writer questioned whether "if enough parents complain, it would be possible to get them to take this message off the lines."

The telephone company spokesman noted that Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Kansas City, like other telephone companies, "cannot disconnect telephone service unless it is used for fraudulent purposes or by someone placing annoying, obscene or harassing calls."

"In this case, each customer who calls the number is doing so by his or her own choice. Our customers are not receiving calls placed to their offices or homes."

Government authorities, with whom this matter has been discussed, indicate that because there is no unlawful activity involved, service cannot be disconnected, said the company official.

Odom's two big plays key Packers' victory

BY CLIFF CHRISTI
BUFFALO — The public, in some locales anyway, isn't buying. Just as people wouldn't pay the full price for a reproduction rather than an original work of art, they're not willing to dole out the full price to watch a team of virtually all rookies play professional football rather than the big-name veterans.

That was the case here Friday night when only 30,119 fans showed up in 80,020-seat Rich Stadium to watch the Green Bay Packers and Buffalo Bills play a pre-season game. An official count was given but the Bills had been swamped by requests for refunds from their season ticket paying fans, who were obliged to originally purchase the ducats for the game as part of their package.

However, the coaches and some of the veterans on hand contended those who come to watch are being cheated.

After the Packers escaped with a 16-13 victory over the Bills, they were saying the product was more than a cheap imitation.

Sitting in front of his locker, Larry Heiner, a three-year veteran who reported to camp in defiance of the National Football League players' strike, said, "I'll tell you, these guys hustle and they're got guts too. These guys are proud to put on a Packer uniform and they play like it."

Hefner was speaking primarily for the defense, which had gone seven quarters and more than 13 minutes of the eighth before allowing a score. Last week in a game-like scrimmage against Chicago — the encounter isn't included in the pre-season record — the Packers had recorded a 17-0 shutout.

But Coach Dan Devine was praising his entire roster, when he said, "There is a close-knit feeling in this group. And they're hustling. Everybody is working hard and that makes up for a lot of weaknesses."

Similarly impressed, Bill Coach Lou Saben said of the Packer rookies, "This group here is a pretty good football team."

Along with a miserly defense, the Packer victory was largely accomplished through the big-play heroics of Steve Odom.

His 64-year punt return for a touchdown in the fourth quarter proved to be the final margin of victory. At the time — 10:26 remained in the game — it appeared considerably less significant because it provided the Packers with a comfortable 16-0 edge.

Earlier, Odom set up the first touchdown of the game by catching a 50-yard pass from quarterback Jerry Tagge, placing the ball at the one yard line.

Replaying his punt return, Odom said, "I dropped the ball and might have suckered them into the middle. A return was set up, but it was a side return. But a little hole opened up and I worked my way through the hole."

With his blazing speed, Odom simply outran most of the Bills once he was past the initial wall of defenders, although two sharp cuts, one just before the goal line, aided his effort.

On their first possession, the Packers moved from their own 15-yard line to the Bills' one in 10 plays, only to be stalled. Running back Eric Torkelson on a determined run, during which he broke three tackles, carried the ball from the 15 within a foot of the goal line.

But then three times in a row, the Packers were checked trying to put the ball in the end zone. And on the final try, quarterback Charlie Napper fumbled the snap from center, leading up to a 22-yard field goal try by Chester Marcol.

The normally reliable Packer "toe" shanked the kick and it went wide to the right.

Following the next Packer possession and with 1:41 to go in the first quarter, Jerry Tagge made his first appearance at quarterback. And in five plays, with the help of a running-into-the-punter penalty against Buffalo, the Packers were on the board as Tagge hit Odom with his long bomb. The victimized defender was Dennis Draper, who actually had the play well covered.

"They were playing outside," Odom explained, "so I tried to run at him so he didn't know which way I was going to go. I just put a little move on him and beat him up field. The ball was a little underthrown, we went up and I just went up a little higher."

Two plays later, Tagge scored on a sneak from the one. The extra point failed when John Cherry fumbled the snap, fled toward the sideline and was tackled.

Relishing the prospect of having someone with Odom's speed on the flank this year, Tagge said, "Shoot, you get a guy out there like that, that can flat outrun somebody, it sure helps our game plan."

Thankful for the opportunity to get some of the rust out, Tagge also added, "It felt good to get my feet wet and just to get started again. I wasn't particularly impressed with the timing, rhythm and things like that. But practice can iron that out. You have to get started some time."

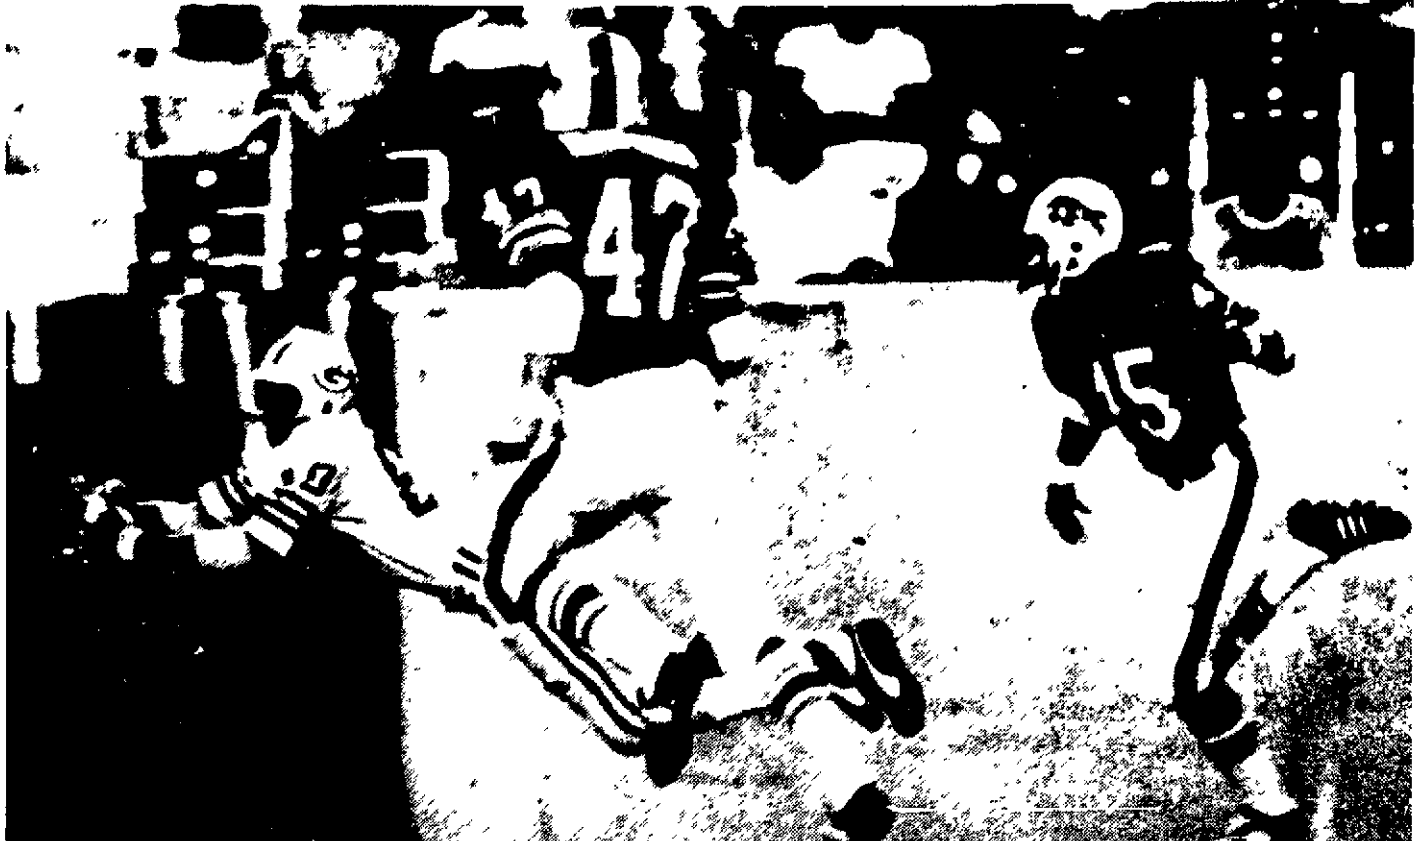

Devine said, "We accomplished what we wanted with Jerry. I guess he played two series. We wanted him to get a little taste of competition, which he hasn't had. He needs every bit of work he can get. And he'll play more next week."

On Tagge's second drive, he marched the offense from the Packer 37 to the Bill 20. The biggest hunk of yardage was consumed on a third down, 22-yard pass to tight end Brent Landwell.

But once at the 20, the drive halted and Marcol was summoned for a 37-yard field goal try, which he converted.

Napper returned for the Packers' final two possessions of the half, and thereafter the offense bogged down. The Packers picked up just two first downs and less than 60 total yards after intermission.

Napper blamed the inefficiency partly on himself. Commenting on the switch to Tagge and then back again, he said, "It breaks your concentration. I felt real comfortable when I went in there on the first drive." He added,

Foxes romp, 11-6, to increase lead

BY DAVE VOLKMAN
Usually, when a pitcher gives up six runs on 15 hits, one will look for his name in the "losing pitcher" column.

However, Friday night at Goodland Field gave the 352 "true-blue" Foxes fans several of the unusual and unexpected things to cheer about — most notably, of course, an 11-6 Appleton win over Decatur.

Knuckle-balling Bobby Combs survived a shaky start (but not a shakier eighth inning) to pick up his fifth victory against six defeats. Paul Sands picked up the save.

Combs got himself in hot water in the first inning, yielding a pair of runs on five base hits.

Jim Ray singled to lead off, and after Combs' wild pick-off throw had sent Ray to third, Johnnie LeMaster blooped a double into center field. Ernie Young singled to score LeMaster, but then the Foxes' defense took over, keeping the Commodores from scoring again.

Dave Orr hit a grounder between first and second ) which first-sacker Larry Walters raced over to grab, throwing to Ed Wheeler at second to force Young. Dave Stabelfeldt followed with a double down the left field line, but Orr was gunned down at third on Nick Medrano's perfect throw. Don Sasser followed with an infield single, but was forced at second by Mike Wilkins to end the inning.

Appleton made the score 2-1 in the second inning as Kevin Bell drew a one-out walk, Wheeler singled to left, Mike Wolf was hit by a Jim Davidson pitch (loading the bases) and Combs walked on four pitches, forcing in Bell.

The Foxes took the lead for good in the third with a pair of runs.

Medrano legged out a triple to left-center to start things off. After Mike Ondina singled him home, Larry Walters doubled, sending Ondina to third. Wheeler was walked intentionally to fill the bases with one out, and Mike Dlugach grounded to short, scoring Ondina. Wheeler's hard slide into second base broke up a possible twin-killing, but he took the worst of it and was forced to leave the game at the end of the inning.

In the fourth, Medrano hit a two-out double, and Ondina kissed Davidson's first offering over the right field wall.

Not to be denied in extra base laurels, Bell teed off on Davidson's first pitch of the fifth inning, sending over the left-field wall for a 6-2 Appleton lead.

After Eric Thomas reached on an error and Dlugach singled, Davidson was

Tigers stop Brewers with Lemanczyk, Hiller

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Lemanczyk and John Hiller teamed to stop Milwaukee on five hits, pitching the Detroit Tigers to 4-1 victory over the Brewers Friday night.

Following a 55-minute rain delay during the fifth inning, Ed Brinkman tripled to the right field wall and scored Detroit's first run on a single by Gene Lamont. After Ron Leflore forced Lamont at second, Leflore stole second and scored on Gary Sutherland's single.

The Tigers made it 3-0 in the sixth when Bill Freehan singled and scored on Aurelio Rodriguez' two-out double. Detroit got its final run in the ninth on two-out singles by Lamont, Leflore and Sutherland.

Lemanczyk, 1-0, allowed three hits over the first seven innings but was lifted after Don Money beat out an infield hit to open the eighth. Money scored on a one-out double by George Scott, but Hiller got out of the inning by striking out Johnny Briggs and Darrell Porter.

The victory, Detroit's sixth in the past eight games, moved the Tigers from last place in the American League East to fourth, one-half game ahead of the Brewers and the New York Yankees. The Tigers had been in last place since July 15.

Marichal comeback successful

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
"It's good to be back."

Juan Marichal, shunted to the disabled list with a back ailment for nearly two months, rejoined the living Friday night.

Reactivated earlier in the day, the 35-year-old right-hander with the distinctive high kick pitched six innings of solid relief, stopping Baltimore on two hits and leading the Boston Red Sox to a 7-5 victory over the Orioles.

It was the 241st career victory for Marichal, purchased by Boston during the winter after 14 years of meritorious service with the San Francisco Giants, and his first triumph since May 15.

"I feel good, very good," Marichal said. "I'm very optimistic now. I just hope it doesn't take as long to get No. 242 as it did No. 241."

"That was a long time between victories."

Elsewhere in the American League, the Oakland A's edged the Chicago White Sox 3-2, the California Angels trimmed the Minnesota Twins 3-2 in a game halted by rain in the seventh inning, the Kansas City Royals stopped the Texas Rangers 4-0, the Detroit Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1 and the Cleveland Indians pounded the New York Yankees 8-2.

A healthy Marichal would certainly be a shot in the arm for Boston's pennant chances in the tight American League East. The Red Sox lead second-place Cleveland by 2½ games, but only 6½ games separate the six clubs in the division.

"It gives us a big boost," said Manager Darrell Johnson. "He'll definitely start one game in our doubleheader in Milwaukee Tuesday night, then we'll play it by ear."

Marichal replaced Boston starter Rick Wise in the fourth inning when Wise had to leave with a sore shoulder after walking Bobby Grich to start the inning. Boog Powell greeted Marichal with a line single and Don Baylor walked to load the bases, then Earl Williams cleared them with a double.

But after that shaky start, Marichal did not allow a hit the rest of the way. The only Oriole to reach base was Enos Cabell, who walked to lead off the seventh but was picked off first by Marichal.

In his six innings of work, Marichal allowed two hits, struck out four and walked two. He was particularly strong at the finish, striking out Baylor and Williams to end the game.

"I threw the ball real well after those first three guys," Marichal said. "After I walked Baylor I thought, 'Oh, no, you don't want to blow it after you get this chance.'"

"He was just super after he got his feet on the ground," observed Johnson. "He threw the heck out of the ball."

After Williams' three-run double put

Baltimore on top 5-4. Dwight Evan drew Boston even with a sacrifice fly in the fifth. The Red Sox got the winning runs in the seventh when Carl Yastrzemski singled, Rico Petrocelli walked and Evans laced a two-run triple over the head of Oriole center fielder Paul Blair.

A's 3, White Sox 2
Sprinter Herb Washington did his thing, providing the margin of difference for the A's.

"When I go in there for a guy like Sal Bando, I have to do two things," the pinch-running specialist said. "I have to steal and I have to score."

That's exactly what he did. With two out in the eighth he stole second, then scored the winning run on a single by Reggie Jackson.

Angels 3, Twins 2
Frank Robinson, Bruce Bochte and Bobby Valentine delivered run-scoring singles in the fourth inning and the Angels held on to win a game which was called during the top half of the seventh inning because of rain.

The field, soaked by a pregame rain, was further softened by a steady mist that fell during the game. The rain intensified during the fourth inning and the umpires finally called a halt in the seventh.

The wet conditions caused numerous misplays. Minnesota's Eric Soderholm and Rod Carew both fell on the basepaths and were tagged out, while Bobby Darwin slipped as he was trotting out a home run. California's Mickey Rivers fell down trying to steal second and second baseman Denny Doyle dropped a routine pop fly while looking up into the rain.

Royals 8, Rangers 0
Nelson Briles and Steve Mingori teamed to shut out Texas on 10 hits, with Briles posting the 100th victory of his career and Mingori coming on to retire the final two batters. The Royals were aided by five double plays.

"This was my best performance of the year," said Briles. "I found out early in the game I had good stuff and I was able to challenge the hitters."

His manager, Jack McKeon, agreed. "Briles pitched a super game," McKeon said. "He was in complete command."

Gary Sutherland had a pair of run-scoring singles for the Tigers.

Indians 8, Yankees 2
Buddy Bell cleared the bases with a third-inning double to help Cleveland on its way to victory over New York and former Indian pitcher Sam McDowell, 1-5.

Fritz Peterson, 8-6, who went from New York to Cleveland in a big trade earlier this season, got the victory over his ex-teammates, with relief help from another former Yankee, Tom Buskey.

NFL owners, players exchange accusations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four years ago today, owners and players in the National Football League patched up their differences and turned to playing football after engaging in an intensive labor dispute.

History seems unlikely to repeat itself, with both sides currently trading charges and counter-charges on why talks have failed in the month-long strike by the NFL Players Association.

Both the owners and the players association held briefings Friday, and the testimony that emerged showed why talks recessed Thursday for lack of any movement.

Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, president of the association, said his group had made substantial changes in its bargaining demands, but that the owners "did not increase their offer by one cent during the past three days; they continued to try to bust this union."

John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, said in New York the players association had indeed made changes, but also had increased the number of their demands.

"We had expected them to give a little. And they did give some, but they took in some areas too," said Thompson.

"What we received Thursday we might have been able to see as an opening bid, but not for the amount of time we have been negotiating."

One of the new demands owners were most upset about was back payment to all strikers dating to the beginning of training camp.

The money issue and what Thompson termed a "direct attack" on the office of Commissioner Pete Rozelle were two major stumbling blocks in negotiations.

Thompson said the two sides were currently about $36 million apart, with the players asking for an additional $40 million in comparison to the owners offer of $4 million.

In Rozelle, the NFLPA is attacking the man who stepped in to settle the 1970 strike. However, Rozelle has not been able to take any part in this year's negotiations. The players association has modified its demands in this area up to the point of including Rozelle in the settlement of disputes and to use instead an outside arbitrator.

Thompson described the owners as "disillusioned, but resolute" in their determination to keep a united front, and Thompson said he did not see much hope for optimism when talks resume Tuesday.

Curry said the 17 modifications made by the players included the concession that Rozelle could have the same rights as his counterparts in other sports to govern over what he called the "integrity of the game."

"we have substantially reduced our position here and suggested impartial arbitration for day-to-day grievances while allowing the commissioner to concern himself with matters such as gambling and moral torpitude."

Thompson recalled that in the 1970 strike, some 21 veterans reported to training camps during the labor troubles, which were to be a confrontation stage for from two to three weeks.

There are currently over 300 veterans in camp—with 1,183 on strike—and Kermit Alexander of the Philadelphia Eagles and first vice president of the union, said the owners have used threats of bribes, waivers and lawsuits in an attempt to bring more veterans back to camp.

Some players who were injured, according to Alexander, were told that they would fail a physical if they waited to the end of the strike to report while others were offered $10,000 to report in defiance of the players association.

Ed Garvey, association executive director, said all complaints would be substantiated in charges filed with the National Labor Relations Board, which he said he hoped to do by Monday.

Thompson did not see very much optimism that the NFL management and the players would be able to celebrate a happy anniversary.

"In 1970 at this point in time before the strike ended," Thompson said Friday morning, "we were about $250,000 apart."

"Now we're separated by a punt, a commissioner and about $36 million."

Thompson's remark touched on the players desire to cut out the newly installed punt return rule.

Montreal capitalizes on Carlton's mistakes, 3-2

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

Everybody makes mistakes— even

Steve Carlton.

The Philadelphia Phillies' ace made two of them Friday night and the Mon-treau Expos hit them out of the park en route to a 3-2 victory.

"I don't think he wanted to throw that pitch, but pitchers make mistakes," Willie Davis said of his third-inning homer that gave the Expos a 1-0 lead. "If pitchers didn't make mistakes, hitters would be in trouble."

Bob Bailey hit Carlton's second mistake for a home run in the sixth and Davis later took advantage of a mistake by Pete Richert to single home the game-winning run in the ninth.

Davis was in an 0-for-15 slump before the game—but obviously didn't let it destroy his confidence.

"I never worry about statistics," he said. "I just stay in there plugging. I know the hits will come. These came at a moment when they could win a ball game. Statistics just put unnecessary pressure on a guy."

In the other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 in 14 innings; the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the San Diego Padres 2-1 and the Cincinnati Reds routed the San Francisco Giants 9-4.

Ron Hunt led off the Montreal ninth with a double. Pinch runner Larry Lintz moved to third on a fielder's choice, then came home on Davis' single to center.

Steve Rogers, 11-13, snapped a personal five-game personal losing streak with relief help from Chuck Taylor in the ninth inning. It was Rogers' first victory since July 4 and was the fifth time the right-hander has beaten Philadelphia in his career, without a defeat.

Davis' shot over the right-field fence in the third was his seventh home run of the baseball season. Bailey's blast in the sixth off Carlton, 13-7, was his 15th.

Following Bailey's homer, Carlton walked the bases loaded—one intentionally—but got out of the jam by getting Hunt on a fly ball.

Jay Johnstone's home run over the right-field fence in the seventh inning made it 2-1, and the Phillies tied the score in the eighth when Larry Bowa tripled with two out and scored on Mike Schmidt's infield single.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 2
Richie Hebner singled home a run with two out in the 14th inning to give Pittsburgh its victory over St. Louis. Ed Kirkpatrick lined a one-out single off the first base bag and later moved to second on a two-out single by Paul Popovich. Hebner then singled to right to score Kirkpatrick with the game-winning run.

The Cardinals jumped ahead 2-0 in the fourth when Ted Simmons singled and Joe Torre belted his eighth homer of the baseball season.

Al Oliver opened the Pirate fourth with a solo homer to right, his seventh. Willie Stargell then singled and took second on a single by Dave Parker before both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Ken Forsch. Stargell was tagged out in a rundown on Bob Robertson's grounder. But Parker later took third on a passed ball and scored when Mario Mendoza's grounder to second was dropped by Ted Sizemore for an error.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1
Bill Buckner singled twice, scored once and drove in the decisive run, leading Los Angeles over San Diego. The victory was the Dodgers' 14th in a row over the Padres, 11 of them this season.

Don Sutton, 9-8, got the victory, his third in a row after going more than two months without a win. Mike Marshall came on in relief after the first two San Diego batters in the ninth reached Sutton for singles. Marshall pitched his way out of the jam to record his 15th save of the season.

Buckner singled, stole second and scored the Dodgers' first run on Steve Garvey's single to left in the first inning.

In the third, Dave Lopes walked, stole second and came home on Buckner's line drive single to center.

Willie McCovey hit his 13th homer of the season for San Diego leading off the fourth, a towering blow into the center field pavilion.

Reds 9, Giants 4
Cesar Geronimo hit a triple and a home run, and Cincinnati erupted for four runs in the third and fourth innings to rout San Francisco.

Geronimo's leadoff triple was the big blow in the third, which included run-scoring singles by Pete Rose and Ken Griffey off loser Ed Halicki, 1-4, who contributed to the rally with a pair of errors and two wild pitches.

Appleton LL wins
MERRILL — Appleton's Northside Kiwanis Little League team walloped Eau Claire, 14-3, Friday in the opening round of the state LL tournament.

Today, Appleton meets Whitefish Bay, which whipped Roseville, Minn., 7-2, Friday.

'Designated runner' comes through again
CHICAGO (AP) — Herb Washington is the only man in baseball to have scored 20 runs without ever getting to bat and the Oakland A's "designated" runner is finally getting the feel that he's wanted.

"There was a lot of pressure when I first came up and got off to a bad start," said Washington Friday night after had stolen a base with two outs and scored the winning run on Reggie Jackson's single for a 3-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"But now things are going my way. I'm getting the breaks and I feel that I'm one of the boys," said Washington. "You know you're part of the team when guys like Sal Bando, Gene Tenace and Reggie Jackson start kidding you."

Vida Blue and the A's had a 1-0 lead over the Sox going into the seventh inning when Buddy Bradford singled for Chicago's second hit of the game and Dick Allen crashed his 28th homer of the season for a 2-1 Chicago lead.

Although the first two batters went out in the top of the eighth, Bill North singled for the third time and stole his third base of the game. Bando singled North home to tie the score.

Washington came in to run for Bando and stole his 14th base of the season before scoring the winning run on Jackson's hit.

"When I go in there for a guy like Sal Bando, I have to do two things," said Washington. "I have to steal and I have

Fight to the finish

Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds races toward home plate with the Giants' catcher Dave Rader in hot pursuit during a four-run inning for the Reds Friday night. Rose was safe at home after evading a rundown between home and third when teammate Joe Morgan grounded to first and Rose attempted to come home. There was no one between the plate and Rose except the umpire. (AP wirephoto)

Packers triumph, 16-13

though, it is a quarterback's responsibility to be prepared for such a circumstance.

Fortunately, for Green Bay, the Bills managed to do very little threatening on offense. As Saben said, "Offensively, we just didn't seem to get anything generated. We had too many errors, especially penalties. There were two or three key ones that hurt us."

In the first half, Buffalo made only one deep invasion into Packer territory. With 1:12 left in the second quarter, the Bills moved to the Packer 26 before Boris Shapak missed a 33 yard field goal.

Midway through the third quarter, running almost strictly out of an I-formation, the Bills advanced from their 24 to the Packer nine.

Carlester Crumpler, playing the same position as striking O. J. Simpson does, inflicted most of the damage, picking up 35 yards in the march.

And Heffner admitted, "That formation — that they play is hard to play against. It's hard on a middle linebacker because it's hard to read." However, finally faced with a fourth-and-three at the nine, quarterback Gary Marangi decided to go to the air and Howard Ebow picked off the pass in the end zone. It was the first of two thefts by Ebow.

Buffalo's first score came with 1:41 left in the game, when running back Don Calhoun scored from three yards out. With 10 seconds remaining then, Calhoun again scored from the one.

Both TDs were preceded by Packer fumbles. Jim Lewis was guilty first and Terkellian the second time. Lewis fumbled at midfield, Terkellian at the Packer 34.

Packers award game ball to Howard Ebow

By CLIFF CHRISTL

Post-Crescent News Service

BUFFALO — As Howard Ebow walked on the Green Bay Packers' United Air Line charter here Friday night, defensive captain Jim Carter yelled, "Don't lose that ball now, Howard."

Carter need not worry. A free agent rookie who earns a game ball in his first official professional appearance, doesn't let a treasure like that out of his sight.

For his contribution toward the Packers' 16-13 win over Buffalo, which included two intercepted passes, Ebow was awarded the game ball. And it was Carter who made the presentation.

"He played a hell of a game," the Packers' defensive captain said. "He stopped them from scoring with his first interception and made another good play on the other one."

Carter wasn't the only one impressed, either. Coach Dan Devine volunteered in his post-game press conference, "Some of our unsung guys played well. Howard Ebow is a kid I've always liked. He's a fine citizen and he hustles. He did very well. . . . As far as I'm concerned he stood out."

A 5-foot-11, 186-pounder from the University of Houston, Ebow was passed up by all 26 teams last January in the National Football League draft. However, the Packers had him high on their list of sought-after free agents and signed him shortly thereafter.

He attended their spring drills in Scottsdale, Ariz., and has caught the eye of the coaching staff ever since camp started in Green Bay.

"He plays the ball real well, he hits well and he plays the defenses real well," added Dave Hanner, defensive coordinator.

Physically, Ebow is not exceptionally swift, which might be the reason he wasn't drafted by any NFL club. And, apparently, for the same reason, the Packers will also try Ebow at strong safety, where great speed is less of a necessity. Currently, he is performing at left cornerback.

Ebow's first interception came after the Bills' made their deepest penetration of the first three quarters. On a fourth-and-three situation at the Packer nine, he picked off a Gary Marangi pass deep in the end zone and to the left of the goalposts.

"He threw to the end running a curi," Ebow said in his soft spoken way. "But I think the guy ran too close to the end zone line and I just sort of eased in front of him."

His next interception came six plays later at the Packer 29 on a sideline pass.

"I had the deep outside responsibility on the zone and the quarterback took too long to wind up. I saw he was throwing to the sideline and I got a good jump on the ball," Ebow explained.

Also, he might have gotten a good jump on making the final, 47-man roster.

Appleton Legion stays unbeaten in tourney

STURGEON BAY — Appleton came through with a big third inning to take the lead and eventually the game from Green Bay West in the American Legion tournament action here Friday night. Was the final score

Jack Gurholt paced the winners on the mound, as he struck out 13, walked seven and gave up nine hits. The loser, Steve Van Boxel, struck out only two, gave up seven hits and walked six.

The turning point came in the third inning, as Green Bay owned a 1-0 lead after a Van Boxel homer. With two out and nobody on base, Appleton went on a scoring spree which saw four consecutive hits. Two errors on the part of West only aided the Appleton rally and by the time the inning came to a close Appleton took a 5-1 lead and never relinquished it.

Appleton meets Sturgeon Bay in the championship game at 5 p. m. today. If Sturgeon Bay should win the contest, another game between the same teams would follow, as Appleton sports a perfect record in the tournament and Sturgeon Bay has one loss.

Hide-a-way '9' wins

ANTIGO — Appleton Hide-a-way edged Appleton Maritime Bar - Pizza Hut, 2-1, Friday in the ISC-sanctioned state softball tournament.

Hide-a-way rallied from the fourth on Terry Haack's single. In the bottom of the seventh, Dick Roshak singled in the winning run. Winner Glen Nau pitched a 3-hitter and struck out seven. Loser Bob Aschenbrenner allowed seven hits and fanned two.

Tommy's Angels, of Oshkosh, downed Bob & Mary's & Mike's, of Kaukauna, 6-0. Winner Larry Rackow yielded four hits, two of them by Ron Brinkman. Tom Madden and Ray Neveau hit home runs. Hide-a-way meets Tommy's Angels at 6 p. m. Sunday in the double-elimination tourney. Maritime Bar-Pizza Hut and Bob & Mary's & Mike's were both due to see action again today.

Ambulance fees to town may double to $40

MENASHA — Town of Menasha residents needing city ambulance transportation from the town will be billed $40 — double the rate of their city neighbors — if a measure adopted Friday by the public protection committee wins the nod of the City Council Tuesday.

On motion of fourth ward Ald. Felix Ropella, the panel Friday voted 3 to 0 to charge the additional amount. Town residents have been charged $20 per call, per patient, identical to city residents.

Included in the panel's resolution was a $5 surcharge for non-residents of Neenah-Menasha who need ambulance transportation from either city. The charge for such patients now would be $25.

Ropella told the committee the surcharge conforms to a policy in effect in Neenah for a number of years. Municipal ambulance services are provided by the fire departments in both cities.

In all cases, patients are also charged $1 per mile between the point of pickup and hospital.

The panel's adoption of the $40 rate for town residents stemmed from a suggestion by Ropella several weeks ago. The idea was advanced then that town residents do not contribute taxes to help defray the cost of the city service, yet receive identical service. City people contribute via the property tax roll.

The city ambulance, which is stationed at fire station No. two on State 47, serves the east side of the town.

Ropella told the two other panel members present Friday, Aids. Hugh (Bud) Geibel and Robert Winarski, that City Atty. Richard Steffens has reviewed the proposal and found no legal problems with it.

The city panel took no action on the proposal at an earlier meeting pending town board consideration of the measure, but City Clerk George Protogere said Friday he had not received a communication from the town.

The higher rate in the town and the surcharge are effective Tuesday pending council approval.

Revision asked in deputy fire chief's duties

MENASHA — Interviews that were supposed to have been held Thursday night with the applicants for the post of deputy fire chief have been postponed until later, following a vote of the police and fire commission Thursday to amend the ordinance creating the post.

The commission requested the common council to amend the ordinance so that the deputy chief does not also have to serve as chief training officer.

The ordinance creating the position of deputy fire chief was approved July 18 and a section specified that the successful candidate "shall also be chief training officer."

The commission will delay interviewing candidates until the common council acts on the suggested amendment. Three applicants appeared for interviews Thursday night.

Young Puerto Rican pilot soaks up EAA scene

BY KATHY COOPMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

Oshkosh — Barrelling down flyways and tearing down engines have been long-time ambitions of a young Puerto Rican man who must have a trace of airplane fuel in his blood.

Wilfred H. Dorna, 18, of Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, earned his commercial pilot's license just two weeks ago, a very important and exciting accomplishment for him.

This week he is experiencing another thrill — he and his parents are attending the Experimental Aircraft Association fly-in at Wittman Field in Oshkosh.

For a full week Dorna can inspect the aircraft that intrigue him and jaw about motors and props and gauges with the fliers who share his enthusiasm.

Dorna began training for his license examination in 1966 when he first was taken under his aviator father's wing. The plan which he worked on and completed his training on was his father's Citabria and the initial bug to learn to fly was apparently inherited from him.

"It is my father's plane," Dorna said, "but it is like my plane, too. I rebuilt the engine of my aircraft — I really like mechanics and putting the planes together."

This second interest, that of building and rebuilding a plane is an important skill for a flyer, especially one whose heartthrob is an experimental aircraft.

Dorna, his father, and an older brother are building their own experimental aircraft, a Junkster. It has been two and one-half years in the works, but is now nearing completion.

That is why the EAA fly-in was of particular interest to the young man, whose ambition is to become a commercial pilot for a major airline like his brother.

He spends his days combing the plane parking areas, inspecting engines and designs and talking shop with the fliers. His parents, both travel and flying enthusiasts, are right there with him, picking up ideas.

A family friend accompanied the Dornas on this trip to Oshkosh. The visit here is the first for the Dornas, though they have traveled and lived in the United States before.

Young Dorna wants to "keep on flying all the time" once he returns to his country and begins instrument ground school.

Aviation in Puerto Rico, Dorna said, is much more restricted than it is in the U. S.

"It is more fun to fly here than in Puerto Rico," he said. "There is the FAA there just like here, but it is more restricted. There are lots of regulations. You don't have too many private airports."

Dorna "likes all this stuff" and intends to turn his hobby into his career. He says he is anxious to return home to put a few of his newly acquired ideas into his father's plane.

City may aid needy Neenah residents faced with costly elm tree removals

NEENAH — Some city residents who face large bills for tree removal may get relief.

Their bills aren't being reduced, but the city is considering establishment of a financing plan.

Wayne Bryan, director of public works, reported to the finance and capital expenditures committee Friday that residents have complained to him about the private costs of tree removal. One elderly couple was forced to have three Dutch elm diseased trees removed, and the cost came to $1,200.

A city ordinance prohibits city participation in the cost of tree removals from private property, but Ald. Michael Ellis suggested the financing plan for special cases. In cases where tree removal is ordered by the city, and if the cost of removal would create a financial hardship, the property owner may request the time payment assistance. According to the Ellis plan, the finance committee would have to approve any such request from a property owner, and send a recommendation to the City Council.

Committee members stressed that the assistance would be available only for hardship cases. The city will pay the cost of removal, and allow the property owner up to five years to repay the city on an installment basis.

City Atty. Daniel Murphy was instructed to study the city's tree removal ordinance and report back to the committee on whether such a plan could legally be implemented.

In other action Friday, the finance committee:

— Instructed Murphy to take the necessary legal steps to implement annexation of the 27-acre Southview Park property. The city has owned the land since 1965, but it remains in the Town of Neenah. A corner of the parcel is under jurisdiction of the board of education for a possible future school site, so the board will be notified of the city's annexation intent.

— Recommendation that the sewage transportation contract be amended to allow sewer service for Specialty Machine Co., 449 S. Green Bay Road. The company, owned by Carl Johnson, is located in the Town of Neenah. It is seeking sewer service through the Courtney Place sanitary district, which contracts with the city to have sewage transported to the sewage treatment plant.

— Accepted a report from a special committee and then recommended that the City Council adopt a plan to put the city assessment roll, tax roll and tax billing procedures on the county computer system. City Finance Director John Sahli reported the switch would eliminate a good deal of pressure work and overtime for city employees who currently handle the rolls, and would reduce pressure on the use of machines in city hall.

Sahli also said new machines which had been budgeted at $6,000 would no longer be necessary if the county computer is utilized. He said that money could be transferred to cover the first-year cost of using the computer, which will not exceed $4,500. Authorization of that expenditure was also recommended by the finance committee.

— Instructed Joseph Kraus, director of city administration, to inform Mayor Roman Hauser that "we want to take a vote on the Kampo industrial park purchase on Aug. 21 in a committee-of-the-whole session. Hauser heads a special committee which is to report back to the finance committee on the impact of the industrial park purchase. The impact report should be brought to the finance committee prior to its Aug. 16 meeting so a recommendation can be forwarded prior to the vote.

Police and fire

KIMBERLY — Dr. Phillip Bouressa, 126 Sunset Drive, reported to police that someone stole a pile of lumber consisting of 2 by 4s and 2 by 10s of assorted lengths from the site of a home he is constructing on Sunset Drive.

The pile consisted of about 50 pieces of lumber valued together at about $160.

UWO chancellor sees a 'learning revolution'

OSHKOSH — A revolution on campus, not one with placards and demonstrations but one in learning, was described by Chancellor Robert Birnbaum in his talk to UWO summer session graduates Friday night at the Koff Sports Center.

"Over the past decade, college chancellors have been busy trying to stop revolutions. Tonight, however, I would like to invite you to join one," he told the 250 graduating seniors, the 120 master's degree recipients and their families and friends.

"All of you are eligible — the graduating students, our learned faculty, and particularly our visitors and guests," the chancellor said he was referring to the learning revolution that is bringing new learners to higher education and increasing the ways in which colleges and universities will enrich the personal and communal life of all.

He cited the example of Kimberly-Clark Corp. where employees of all ages will be going back to school, pursuing their own cultural, avocational, intellectual and technical interests as the result of that firm's program to give employees the opportunities and financial resources to broaden their knowledge.

The chancellor called attention to the "Live In and Learn" program being instituted at Oshkosh this fall for senior citizens who will live in university residence halls, audit classes and involve themselves in the university's cultural and social programs.

He listed William R. Keitt, Menasha, former president and board chairman of Kimberly-Clark Corp., as a revolutionary in the field of promoting employee education and Marie Merrill of Beaver Dam and 89-year-old Albert Glockzin of Appleton as revolutionaries among the senior citizens who are seeking a continuation of their education.

Birnbaum also called attention to a father and mother and their daughter, each of whom received a bachelor's degree in education at the commencement, as examples of the new revolution in learning. They are Mr. and Mrs. Nick Strumberger of Pardeeville and their daughter, Mrs. Robert Neno of Beaver Dam.

The number of adult learners at UWO will increase dramatically over the next five years and the university is committed to serving their needs, the chancellor continued.

"So I won't say goodbye tonight," he told the graduates. "Instead, I'll say 'We'll see you again soon.'"

Master and bachelor degrees were awarded to more than 300 students during ceremonies Friday.

The recipients, by community, from the Valley, are:

Police & fire beat

OSHKOSH — About 8,000 pounds of old railroad track was reported missing Friday to Winnebago County police by Leonard Ford, who is removing the rails from the abandoned Milwaukee Road, southwest of Omro.

Ford told police 16 rails are missing. They are 30 feet long and weigh 500 pounds each, he said. He showed police tracks which indicated at least three of the rails had been dragged, probably with a tractor, into a nearby woods.

Ford said the rails are valued at from $50 to $75 each and are being trucked to a Chicago steel mill.

OSHKOSH — Four-year-old Michael S. Chapman, 915 E. Murdock Ave., is under doctor's care for injuries he received shortly after 9 p.m., Friday when he ran into the street in front of his home to retrieve a toy. Police said the boy was struck by the rear bumper of a passing car driven by Letta F. Gamsky, 78, 1211 Merritt Ave., as he stopped to pick up the toy. He was treated for concussion and was under observation for a possible skull fracture.

OSHKOSH — Four young Appleton men were injured about 2 a.m. today when their car went off the edge of Calumet Street, just west of Oneida, Town of Menasha, and struck a guard rail.

Three passengers were taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Appleton, for treatment. They are Patrick J. Koller, 19, 1801½ Jefferson, with a puncture wound and injured foot; Gerald H. Fuller, 18, 519 E. Maple, body scrapes and foot injury; and Mike G. Koller, 17, 1303 S. Oneida, broken collar bone.

The driver, Steven P. Maas, 18, 1825 S. Jackson, received bruises and lacerations but was not transported to the hospital.

OSHKOSH — Two Oshkosh people were treated at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, for injuries received in a three-car mishap on County Trunk A.

Vandals break 11 windows in Neenah

NEENAH — An early morning vandal spree today left a wake of destruction in the form of broken glass in the N. Commercial Street area of the Island.

According to Neenah police, 11 windows were found broken by marbles, 10 of them in business establishments and one in a residence.

Apparently the vandals, traveling down Commercial Street, shot out windows at random in a four block stretch. All of the windows were quite large, ranging from three to eight feet wide.

north of GG, about 4:45 p.m., Friday.

They were Edna M. Mathwig, 59, 2124 Island Beach, who received a sore back, and Carl F. Mathwig, same address, a passenger in the car she was driving. He had a lacerated elbow.

Winnebago County Police said the Mathwig car stopped for a car ahead which was waiting to make a left turn off A. A car driven by James H. Weaver, 22, 4418 Monroe, Oshkosh, was unable to stop as it approached from the rear. Weaver tried to go around the vehicles and an approaching car driven by Kevin L. Deno, 22, Kimberly, struck both the Mathwig and Weaver cars in an effort to avoid an accident.

Celebration Singer to perform in Neenah

NEENAH — Celebration Singers of Wisconsin Rapids will present a program at the 9:30 a.m. Sunday service at the First Presbyterian Church.

The group will appear at 8 p.m. Saturday at the High Cliff State Park campgrounds services.

PSC allows change for K-C train shed

NEENAH — The Public Service Commission has granted an exemption to Kimberly-Clark Corporation to construct a train shed at a door opening to the Lakeview Mill.

Kimberly-Clark filed an application for an exemption from the railroad track clearance law for expansion of a train shed at the mill June 5 and a hearing was held before PSC Examiner James A. Spiegel July 17.

In the order granting the exemption, the PSC set conditions that the paper firm properly mark the structure with warning signs. The minimum clearance authorized was 18 feet about the top of the rail.

EAA pilot crashes with dream

BY MARK HANSMANN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — A "very fascinating man" who envisioned airway-highway connections throughout the world crashed Friday with his dream.

Dewey Bryan, 53, of Highland, Mich., was killed instantly when his "Bryan III Roadable" crashed on take-off at about 10:30 a.m. The fatal accident occurred on the third day of the Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) convention at Wittman Field.

The craft that took Bryan's life had been designed and built by him, the pioneer of "Roadables"—aircraft with a single wing that folds up to allow its use for highway driving. Bryan had built two other roadables. The first is in the EAA museum at Hales Corners, Wis. Parts of the second were used to build the craft that crashed Friday.

Rich Demond of Whitmore Lake, Mich., was in position to take off immediately after Bryan on the north-south runway Friday morning. "He took off and it appeared normal," the long-time friend of Bryan's said. Then, when the Roadable was 50-75 feet off the ground, the wing tilted to the left. The left end of the wing hit ground off the side of the runway, and the plane flipped over. Bryan was killed instantly, becoming the first fatality in the 22-year history of EAA conventions.

"Aviation was his life," Demond said of Bryan. "He wanted to make it available for the small man. Less radios and equipment and more eyeball use was his concept." Another concept of Bryan's was a worldwide network of landing strips along major highways. When Roadables caught on as a popular aircraft, Bryan figured, the strips would allow pilots to land in bad weather and proceed along the highways.

Richard Strickhouser of Highland, Mich., called Bryan the "Henry Ford of Roadable aircraft," a few others have been built and flown, but Bryan's was the first that had a folding wing which could stay on the craft during highway use.

It apparently was the folding wing that caused Bryan's death. EAA officials said a bolt had not been put in place, and that caused the crash. A full investigation will be conducted by EAA and Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) officials to clear up any questions as to the cause of the crash.

Strickhouser called Bryan "a very fascinating man." They were old friends, and the two and their wives were staying together during the EAA convention at an area motel. They worked together too. Bryan was a project mechanic at the General Motors proving grounds in Milford, Mich. His wife was at the EAA convention with him Friday, but apparently didn't witness the fatal crash. He has three grown daughters.

Bryan has been an EAA member since 1954 according to Paul Poberzney, EAA president. The Michigan flyer brought his Roadable to the convention at Oshkosh last year, and found it always attracted much attention. He was publicized widely in area media, including a feature on a Green Bay television station just a couple of days prior to the crash.

The plane wreckage was stored in a shed at Wittman Field after the crash Friday awaiting inspection by aviation officials. It was described by Demond as being a small, low-winged plane with a wingspan of about 20 feet and a length of slightly more than 20 feet. It was capable of air speeds up to about 150 miles per hour and highway speeds of about 75 miles per hour. It was called "a dream of a lot of people," since few have the technological know-how to build one and fly it.

The convention went on following the crash Friday, and many of the thousands of visitors were unaware anything had happened. Officials of the extremely safety-minded EAA said no changes were planned in the convention schedule, which continues into the middle of next week.

Police-society trust necessary

BY MAIJA PENIKS
Post-Crescent staff writer

Among the most crucial and immediate law enforcement problems facing society today is community-police relations, "but if society expects the policeman to cope with the difficult and complex situation and laws of today, it has the responsibility to give them the proper preparation for that task."

The statement was made Friday by Lt. Gov. Martin Schreiber at the Fox Valley Technical Institute's police academy graduation.

A total of 18 men from 14 law enforcement agencies in the state received their certificates of completion from the 240-hour program for police recruits.

"The President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice has stated that no lasting improvement in law enforcement is likely unless police-community relations are improved," Schreiber said.

This, he added, will take an effort by both communities and police departments. "We must undertake a renewed effort at understanding the rights and duties of citizens and policemen, and we must do it soon."

Schreiber went on to cite from the writings of August Vollman, professor of criminology, who said 40 years ago:

"The policeman is denounced by the public, criticized by preachers, ridiculed in the movies, berated by newspapers and unsupported by prosecuting officers and judges."

"He is shunned by respectables, hated by criminals, deceived by everyone, kicked around by brainless or crooked politicians. He is exposed to countless temptations and dangers, condemned when he enforces the law and dismissed when he doesn't."

"He is supposed to possess the qualifications of soldiers, doctors, lawyers, diplomats and educators with remunerations less than that of a daily laborer."

This summation, Schreiber said, may be tragically as accurate and applicable today as it was 40 years ago.

The state official illustrated his point with statistics involving the deaths, and assaults on policemen, calling this "one of the most dangerous occupations in this country, which does not always receive public support because of the general public's dissatisfaction with crime in the streets."

In short, he said, if people are afraid to walk on the street — and they are — than the feeling is that society does not have adequate law enforcement.

"Something has to give," Schreiber said. "Our current approach hasn't seemed to work. Our police departments must begin to modify their procedures to cope with a changing environment. They must change if the peace officer is again to be viewed by the community as the friendly cop on the beat."

For years, the lieutenant governor stated, society's method of curing crime has been to legislate it off the streets. By passing laws which are hard to enforce, "all we are doing is shifting the problem from the public to the shoulders of patrolmen and police officials."

"These public servants too often become scapegoats from society's inability to confront and resolve deeper problems," he added.

Schreiber said society has a long and difficult task ahead "if we are to achieve the level of dignity and understanding for peace officers that they deserve."

Training programs such as these (FVTI), he said, are in important beginning in the establishment of a closer relationship between police and the people they serve.

"If society expects you to cope with the difficult and complex situations you will face, it has the responsibility to give you proper preparation for that task," he stated.

Schreiber then went on to list the things that society and police can do to improve the operation of this system of law enforcement:

- Promote an adequate salary and benefit package, which would attract quality people;
- Continue to place a very high priority on training programs;

- "The increasingly complex challenges faced by police, requiring knowledge of such things as community relations, minority problems, legal principles, laboratory techniques, mob control and human behavior demand that all police be given thorough and frequent training and retraining," Schreiber said.

- Get a better system to process police-community problems to replace the present review board, "which has been labeled a cop-out, impractical, slow and unfair. We have found that rarely does a review board promote good feelings between police and citizens."

Police graduation

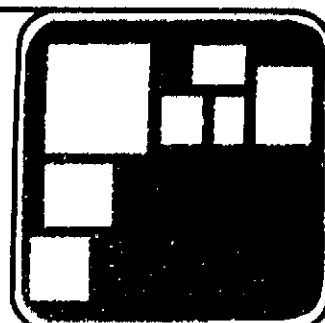

A plaque in appreciation for the police recruit training program, conducted by the Fox Valley Technical Institute police academy, was presented to Edward Krueger, right, head of the program, Friday during

I-57 route to Green Bay gets okay

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The general design for much of a proposed multi-lane highway between Milwaukee and Green Bay has received federal approval, state highway officials reported Friday.

The State Highway Commission, encountering protests from landowners and environmentalists, abandoned plans to cut the highway through the scenic Kettle Moraine and designed it instead along U.S. 141 nearer Lake Michigan.

Despite the delay, the state still hopes the project can win eligibility for government funds under the interstate highway program, and have suggested I-57 or I-43 be its title.

The state Division of Highways said the Federal Highway Administration has approved the state's design from the Green Bay area south to Cedar Grove in Sheboygan County.

The government had approved the general U.S. 141 corridor more than a year ago.

The exact link between Cedar Grove and downtown Milwaukee via Ozaukee County remains indefinite, reflecting Milwaukee opposition to looping the highway west toward Milwaukee

County Stadium rather than using U.S. 141 into Milwaukee's east side.

Approval of the design means bids for the project will probably be let next fall and construction could begin in 1976, the division said. The entire route is expected to be open for traffic in 1980.

The interstate, which will be 90 per cent federally funded, will use the right-of-way of U.S. 141 for about 11 miles of the 51 mile segment from the Sheboygan River to Green Bay, the division said.

Its exact location in Ozaukee County, where environmentalists had feared it might come too close to the Cedarburg bog and ruin that wildlife area, has not yet been determined, a spokesman said.

In Sheboygan, Manitowoc and Brown counties, where the highway does not use U.S. 141 right-of-way, the approved design calls for it to run generally a half-mile west of U.S. 141.

Between Sheboygan and Saukville, U.S. 141 has already been constructed to freeway standards. Original state plans called for the interstate highway to run further west than U.S. 141, at a cost estimated at $25 million more than the route paralleling that highway.

Strike ends at Tuttle Press

Operations at Tuttle Press Co., 600 E. Hancock St., Appleton, should be back in full swing by Monday after members of the Pulp, Sulfite and Paper Makers Union Local 1324, AEL-CIO, ratified a new contract Friday morning.

The approximately 245 members of the union had been on strike since July 17.

The ratification followed sessions between management and the union's negotiating committee with a state mediator present on Thursday. The contract brought to the membership for a vote Friday carried only minor differences from the one turned down by a 117-70 vote two weeks ago.

Friday's vote was 111-64 in favor of the two-year pact agreed to the day before by management and the negotiating committee.

Henry Bailey, company president, said workers were back on the job three hours after the contract was ratified at 11 a.m. Friday, and he expects full scale operations to resume Monday.

day.

Neither Bailey nor George Marquardt, head of Local 1324, would give details of the contract that was approved. Bailey did say, however, that it called for increases similar to those being implemented under other contracts being signed in the area.

Local 1324 had been without a contract since July 1. The walkout on July 17 came as a surprise to the company, which had expected the union membership to ratify the agreement that had been worked out between them and the negotiating committee for Local 1324, which included international representatives.

The two sides didn't meet again until Thursday, again with a mediator. This time, however, the negotiating committee's recommendation to accept the offer was heeded by the union membership.

The issues involved in the dispute were never spelled out, either by management or the union.

U. S. Judge dismisses suit against VanSusteren

MILWAUKEE — U. S. District Judge John W. Reynolds has dismissed a Milwaukee man's lawsuit against Outagamie County Judge Urban P. VanSusteren.

James A. Sigl, who two years ago was jailed briefly on orders from VanSusteren because he failed to make his alimony payments, said he intends to appeal Reynolds' decision to U. S. Circuit Court in Chicago.

Reynolds ruled that VanSusteren, who had retained an attorney, can recover his costs in the action.

Sigl brought a class action suit against VanSusteren in which he charged that Wisconsin's alimony law, which has since been changed, discriminated against men.

Sigl asked that the statute be declared void.

The action is moot, Reynolds wrote, because the statute Sigl sought to have declared unconstitutional has been amended by the Wisconsin legislature and, according to Reynolds, Sigl now concedes that the law is presently constitutional.

Further, Reynolds wrote, Sigl and his ex-wife, have entered into a stipulation which had the effect of vacating VanSusteren's alimony order, which was at issue in the lawsuit.

"In short," Reynolds ruled, "there is neither an existing statute nor an existing court order which is being challenged. The fact that the plaintiff's wife may institute some proceeding at a later date is not sufficient to render this matter justiciable. It certainly does not establish a justiciable controversy between the plaintiff and Judge VanSusteren."

Sigl complained that Reynolds did not settle the issue of the constitutionality of Wisconsin's alimony statute prior to 1972, when it was changed and he was jailed.

Sigl and his wife were divorced in Outagamie County in 1960. On Feb. 9, 1972, VanSusteren held a hearing on an order to show cause why Sigl should not be held in contempt of court for failing to pay alimony. VanSusteren then adjourned the case and ordered Sigl to resume making alimony payments.

The following June, VanSusteren ordered Sigl to pay $900 in back alimony. When Sigl didn't pay by July, VanSusteren signed a warrant and Sigl was arrested. However, he purged himself of the charge shortly after being jailed by paying the back alimony.

Shortly before he was jailed, Sigl brought the federal court suit against VanSusteren.

He said he brought the suit on behalf of himself and other men forced to pay alimony. Sigl contended that Wisconsin's old alimony statute violated the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution which provides equal protection to all citizens.

President of chemical firm dies

Eric D. Lindberg, 82, 1976 Palisades Drive, Appleton, founder and president of the Chemical Supply Co. of Neenah, died Friday at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

He was a native of Kaukauna and a 1912 graduate of Kaukauna High School. That year he went to work as a bookkeeper for the Patten Paper Co., of Appleton. He remained with the firm until 1938, when he left to form his own firm.

Lindberg served in World War I and joined the National Guard after the war. He retired from the Guard in 1923 with the rank of captain.

He is survived by his widow, a son, five grandchildren, all of Appleton, and a sister, in Kaukauna.

He was a member of the Masons, the Elks and the Lions, a charter member of the Butte des Morts Country Club, and served as chairman of the Community Chest fund drive for three years.

Funeral services are pending, but memorials have been established for St. Elizabeth Hospital and All Saints' Episcopal Church, of which he was a member.
